'Jack' Martin Found Guilty on Bribery Charge

VERDICT RETURNED
QUICKLY BY JURY
IN SUPERIOR COURT

Former License Inspector
To Be Sentenced by Judge Pomeroy This Morning.

CHARGE INVOLVED
PURCHASE OF TIRES

Defendant Was Convicted on Embracery Charge at Previous Trial; Martin Takes Stand.

C. E. Martin, known as Jack Martin, former city license inspector, late Tuesday afternoon was found guilty of a charge of bribery in connection with his duties as an inspector. He will be sentenced this morning.

It was Martin's second trial, the defendant's first court appearance recently having resulted in his conviction on an embracery charge.

Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy, of Fulton superior court, charged the jury following arguments by Solicitor-General John A. Boykin, for the state, and Attorney W. R. Bentley, for the defense, and sent the jury to its room for deliberation at 5:30 o'clock. The verdict came in at 6:15.

The charge against Martin involves the purchase by the defendant of four automobile tires and tubes from J. C. Shaw, operating as the Shaw Tire Service, on Edgewood avenue. The state charged that the alleged withholding of enforcement of collection constituted bribery.

Shaw told the jury that Martin did not make any payments on the tire and tube bill of $118, and that when he pressed him for the monthly payments alleged to be due, informing Martin that he had to pay a lot of things, including his city license. Martin told him not to worry, that he would take care of the license for him.

On the stand in his own defense, Martin admitted buying the tires, but said he had paid some of the money, although not remembering how much, and he declared that he had not told Shaw he would take care of the license.

Martin said he had not paid all of the money owing on the tires because he became "hard up" and could not spare the money. He denied that his official conduct had been influenced.

The alleged non-enforcement of the Shaw license was discovered when a new license inspector took over Martin's beat late last year it was testified. Witnesses called by the state included City Clerk Henson Tatum, and several of his deputies, in addition to Councilman James L. Wells, a member of the tax committee, to testify as to the duties and customs of license inspectors.

Shaw testified that when Martin told him he would take care of the license for him, he thought Martin meant to pay the license out of his own pocket and credit it to the bill, having the same effect as if Shaw personally came to the city hall and paid for the license.

The case of ex-Councilman C. L. Chosewood, who is charged with simple larceny, probably will be called for trial today in Judge Pomeroy's court. Other defendants retained on today's calendar include ex-Councilman W. C. McLendon, Jr., charged with simple larceny, and W. A. Adcock, charged with embracery. The case of ex-Alderman J. Allen Couch, who is charged with being interested in a city contract, has been continued until next Thursday on request by Paul S. Etheridge, attorney for Couch, who said Lindsey Camp, associate counsel, was engaged in trial of a civil case.

Corliss Palmer and Brewster,
Living in Poverty, To Remarry

CORLISS PALMER.

LOS ANGELES, March 10.—(AP)—Eugene V. Brewster, former magazine publisher who said his wealth once was rated at $3,000,000, is hoping a stroke of good fortune will save his remaining thousands.

Brewster and his third wife, Corliss Palmer, former Macon, Ga., cigar girl a few years ago, are living—contentedly, they said—in a three-room cottage in the rear of a larger house in Hollywood which they own and rent. The cottage is furnished with paintings and other objects of art collected from all parts of the world.

"Everything I have is mortgaged, and I will lose all if I do not raise some money soon," he said. "I venture to say if I could sell everything for what I paid for it and pay off my debts I would be worth $50,000. I used to be rated at $3,000,000."

Brewster was found in his modest home by reporters who sought to question him about his marriage to Miss Palmer. He said they were married at Ensenada, Mexico, in 1926, after he had obtained a Mexican divorce from his second wife, but that since some courts in this country had declined to recognize Mexican marriages, they would go through another ceremony here within a few days.

"We will be married all over again in order that Corliss' interest in my estate will not be jeopardized," he said.

"I love 'Bruce' just as much as ever Miss Palmer said, adding that she planned a second attempt at a motion picture career. They were playing backgammon.

Brewster's hope of getting a new start lies in a novel he has written and is seeking to have published. He represents several authors who are attempting to sell their work to motion picture companies.

BODY OF GIRL, 10,
FOUND IN SWAMP

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 10.—(AP)—The decapitated and mutilated body of 10-year-old Virginia Brooks, of East San Diego, who had been missing since February 11, was found wrapped in a burlap barley bag on Camp Kearney mesa today by a sheep herder.

The girl vanished while on the way to school. Deputy Sheriff Blake Mason said she apparently had been dead about four weeks and that in addition to being decapitated both legs had been cut off.

The sheep herder said the body had not been where he found it for more than 24 hours as he was in that vicinity yesterday and would have noticed it. The mesa is about 15 miles north of San Diego and little frequented.

A neighbor said he had seen an elderly man, described as a "hermit," take the girl to her school on the outskirts of the city several days previously. Further testimony, however, revealed that the officer had seen her disappearance but no one seems to have seen her after she left home on the morning she disappeared. A possible clue was given to the

JOSEPH P. COTTON
DIES IN HOSPITAL

BALTIMORE, March 10.—(AP)—Joseph Potter Cotton, who as undersecretary of state for nearly two years gained a reputation for frank and direct diplomatic methods, died late today at Johns Hopkins hospital, where he had undergone two major operations in the last six weeks.

Death came at 5:10 o'clock, after the administration of oxygen had failed to prolong his life. At his bedside were his wife and daughter, Isabel, and his New York law partner, George S. Franklin.

Earlier in the day Dr. Joel T. Boone, the White House physician, was a caller, and last night Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, informed that his colleague was dying, visited him.

Mr. Cotton was 55 years old. He underwent operation for spinal infection on January 21 and on February 16 his right eye was removed. The undersecretary bore the chief during the state department's work at the London naval conference, and his health failed last summer. In

Officer Fined for Public Gunplay;
'Third Degree' Confession Held Void

While Recorder A. W. Callaway Tuesday was imposing a fine of $50 and costs upon J. R. Smith, city policeman, for taking pot shots at a negligee while on duty, the officer boasted he could knock the tag from the suitcase and that his marksmanship in this case had failed; the bullet striking the pavement between the negro's feet and causing him to abandon his suitcase and take refuge in flight.

In prosecuting the charges against Smith, Chief Beavers deplored officers who drink on duty and announced his intention of recommending to the police committee that the offender be dismissed from the force.

Judge Humphries' action in throwing out of court the alleged confessions of two negroes resulted from testimony that Walter Haley, a negro prisoner, had been beaten so severely it was necessary to remove him to Grady hospital, and that Thomas Re-

'FLAMING YOUTH'
GIN PARTY DEATH
DECLARED MURDER

20-Year-Old High School
Athlete To Get Life Sentence for Death of Girl,
18.

VALPARAISO, Ind., March 10.—(AP)—Virgil Kirkland, the ex-high school football star, was convicted tonight of murdering Arlene Draves, his companion on a "flaming youth" liquor party last fall.

The jury fixed life imprisonment as the mandatory sentence, after deliberating less than four hours. Sentence will be passed Monday. At that time, the defense announced, it will take the first step for an appeal to higher courts.

The verdict was a compromise between death in the electric chair and assault and battery—a range permitted under the alternatives listed in the instructions of Judge Grant Crum-packer.

It terminated a 14-day trial, replete with sensations, which grew from the drinking party at the home of David Thompson in Gary, November 29.

At that time, Kirkland and four other youths were charged with attacking the 18-year-old girl and bringing about her death. The other four still are to come to trial.

The youth, 20 years old, received the verdict stolidly. His mother, however, rushed to him and cried, "O, my poor boy."

Members of the Draves family were satisfied. "It suits us," Charles Draves, father of the girl, said. He shook hands with the jurors.

"We will appeal at once," said Barratt O'Hara, chief of defense counsel. It was reported the juryman had taken only six ballots between retirement at 4:15 p. m. and the formal verdict at 8:43—five after they had agreed to Kirkland's guilt. Several

GREEN, HARRISON
RAP HOOVER VETO

Labor Head and Southern Senator Attack Killing of Wagner Bill.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—(AP)—President Hoover was criticized today by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and by Senator Harrison for his pocket-veto of the Wagner unemployment bill.

Green said in a statement the "reasons offered for the exercise of the presidential veto are unconvincing and unacceptable" and that "the working people of the United States are deeply disappointed."

Harrison, a Mississippi democrat, charged the president with vetoing the measure because it was a democratic proposal. It would provide federal aid to state employment agencies.

The measure of the deep interest which labor had in this measure, Green said, "the refusal of the president to approve it is regarded as a direct and severe blow to working people in the industrial sections of our country who are unemployed and are forced to seek work."

Green added the federal unemployment agencies "have failed utterly."

In a statement through the democratic national committee, the Mississippi democrat said, "It is evidently the working people of the United States is better that a few million people should go hungry for a year more than to have their agony relieved by a democracy."

Harrison said "every labor man competent to speak for the workman's organization" who appeared at congressional hearings on the bill had supported it.

Arthur Woods, chairman of the president's employment committee, and Secretary Donahoe before he entered the cabinet, were cited as supporters.

"That the existing federal employment service has broken down and shown itself absolutely incompetent and inadequate to take care of the panic emergency has been amply demonstrated," Harrison said. "It has had a year and a half to show its ability to handle the situation and unemployment has not been aided in any degree."

Police Could 'Clean Up' Criminals in Week
If Backed by People, Says General Butler

Major General Smedley D. Butler, firebrand of the United States marines, as he arrived at Terminal station Tuesday with Mrs. Butler, formerly Miss Ethel Peters, granddaughter of Richard Peters, Atlanta pioneer. General Butler spoke Tuesday night at Wesley Memorial auditorium. Staff photo by Bill Mason.

BY BEN COOPER
Major General Smedley D. Butler, of the marines, Tuesday night hooked his left elbow on the reading stand, crossed his left foot over the right, and, in an even conversational tone, more than an hour regaled an audience at the Wesley Memorial auditorium with stories of his work in cleaning up Philadelphia and his service in China.

First making it plain that he had no intention of "shooting the works," or "blowing off the lid," for "it does not get you anywhere in the end," General Butler referred gently, in passing, to his recent "embarrassing moment" (the Mussolini affair), and then "blew off the lid" with the charge that he was fired as police commissioner of Philadelphia "because I started to padlock a couple of big hotels."

"Everybody applauded as long as I hit only the tenderloin and the little fellows," General Butler said, "but when I began working on the big boys, the man who hired me, being a politician, changed his mind and fired me, just as I was going good."

The present commissioner, a pool fellow, called him on the telephone and asked if he had seen what the commissioner had done, referring to working on the clubs, General Butler said, and added, "the commissioner told me, 'well, I suppose I'm on the skids now.'"

Crime is organized and the police forces are not organized, but the police force of any town can clean it up in a week if the administration will give it backing, General Butler declared. Plunging into an explanation of ward politics, he told how political tentacles spread out and "get to everybody." "It is no use blaming the police force for conditions in a city, if all comes back to the voters," he said.

General Butler told how the score of killings changed from 16 to nothing in favor of the gangsters before his advent in Philadelphia to 9 to nothing in favor of policemen by the simple expedient of changing uniform regulations so the police could get to their guns in time without having to unbutton coats. "The gangsters got out of Philadelphia after we killed 12 or 15 of them," he said. "If you arrest them, they get out on bail and cause more trouble. It's quicker and easier to get rid of them by shooting."

General Butler recommended organization of state police and federal police to eliminate the present practice of police in being so busy looking after their own problems they have no time

CAPT. IRA EAKER
CRASHES ON HOP

TOLU, Ky., March 10.—(AP)—Captain Ira Eaker, noted army flyer, was forced down and damaged his plane here today on a transcontinental flight. He escaped with minor scratches and after discovering he could not continue the flight hurriedly set out for Cave-In Rock, Ill., to spend the night.

Captain Eaker landed near the farm of Jack Thomas from where he telephoned a telegram to be sent to Long Island, N. Y., his destination on the flight that started from Long Beach, Cal., early today. At the farm it was said his plane stuck in mud and landing was badly broken up.

He was said to have blamed the forced landing on a "dead engine."

He had started for Cave-In Rock before his newspapermen could get in touch with him.

Prior to his landing here about noon, a definite word had come from the noted army flyer since he took off at 2:13 a. m. from Long Beach, though a plane believed to have been his was seen over Albuquerque, N. M., early today. He was flying a specially built Lockheed-Vega monoplane and had said it was rather a test flight than an effort to break the west-east transcontinental record. He had traversed about 1,700 miles when forced to land.

Hawks at Houston
After Quick Flight

HOUSTON, Texas, March 10.—(AP)—Captain Frank M. Hawks landed here at 4:35 p. m. today after a flight from New York. Hawks took off from New York at 7:16 a. m. and stopped for lunch at Atlanta. His flying time was eight hours and 30 minutes.

The speed flyer will visit here with home folk before returning to New York to sail March 31 for Europe to make several flights.

Lunches Here.
Captain Frank M. Hawks arrived in Atlanta a few minutes before 11 o'clock, central time, giving his flying time from New York to Atlanta as 4 hours and 36 minutes. He lunched here at Candler field, had his ship refueled and checked.

He took off at 12:25, central time, to continue his journey, bucking a strong north wind. The transcontinental speed record holder was greeted here by a handful of Georgians who braved the cold and wind to meet him.

Gov. Long Calls Off
Potlikker Tournament

BATON ROUGE, La., March 10.—(AP)—Because of what he called the "abject surrender" of The Atlanta Constitution, Governor Long today cancelled his potlikker tournament and called off his rounds of controversy.

"The Constitution, apparently frightened at the prospect of having experts pass upon the merits of dunking as compared to crumpling," Governor Long said, "has taken to the timber by falsely declaring the issue settled, and as a result has left us dunkers in clear possession of the field."

"Since they have thrown up the sponge, there is no need for the tournament."

When shown Governor Long's arrogant statement, the ex-editor of The Constitution's disbanded Potlikker and corpore department glanced at the desk covered with pro-crumpling epistles, and said: "In the words of the obsolescent motto of Arkansas, 'regnat populus.'"

Chicken Cancer Which Produces
Its Own Preventive Discovered

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE.
NEW YORK, March 10.—(AP)—A chicken cancer which produces its own preventive has been found at the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research.

It is described as "some substance or condition inhibiting" cancer activity, in an announcement published in Science, official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The cancer is called chicken tumor No. 1, a sarcoma, attacking connective tissues of the body, and is not a human cancer. The Rockefeller study aims at finding clues to the human kind.

The "inhibiting" substance was found in an extract of the cancer material, the nature of which was exactly the opposite of a preventive. This extract increased the production of cancer.

Some of it was put through an extremely fine filter, and then injected into rabbits. In these animals it produced a serum which had the inhibiting effect on the chickens.

The report cites further experiments showing that the preventive stuff could have come only from the cancer-active substance; that it is in some manner a product of the cancer itself.

Whatever this substance may be, neither the activating nor the inhibiting principles are visible. Often water containing them remains perfectly clear.

The Rockefeller scientists report certain wave lengths of ultraviolet light can "inactivate" the agent causing this kind of cancer. The light possessing such lethal power differs from the wave lengths of ultraviolet, which kill living bacteria and the viruses and bacteriophage about whose living qualities there is scientific disagreement. The report says the difference in light is significant, but gives no further explanation.

It is signed by Doctors James B. Murphy, head of the division of biophysics; D. M. Helmer, Albert Claude and Ernest Sturnum.

HOUSE PASSES NEW PRISON FARM BILL

Resolution in House Attacks Eugene Talmadge for "Political Usage" of Market Bulletin.

BY R. E. POWELL.

Final passage, 27 to 22, by the senate Tuesday of the Battle-Allen bill to sell Western & Atlantic railroad rentals for 10 years, and prompt transmission of the measure back to the house for the signature of Speaker Richard B. Russell, Jr., put up to Governor Hardman the approval or rejection of the special session's plan of providing emergency relief for the state's charitable institutions and common schools.

Final passage by the senate of the Battle-Allen bill, coupled with action speeding the bill to the governor either for his signature or veto, brought from the bill's authors a statement that if the executive disapproves the measure "it will mean that the extraordinary session has accomplished nothing."

"Not only will it mean this," the authors of the bill all said in the only statement they have made off the floor, "but it will also mean that the emergency vividly pictured by the governor will not be met and that Georgia will have demonstrated it will not or can not take care of its charities, its schools and institutions."

Unanimous consent for the bill, bearing the signature of President W. Cecil Neill, to be returned to the house was given at the afternoon session. That move, favored both by advocates and opponents of the measure, will speed the bill to the governor's desk where it now faces three probable fates.

The governor can veto the bill and return it to the assembly where it will be necessary for it to receive a two-thirds vote of each house before it becomes law.

If the governor fails to exercise the veto within five days, the bill automatically becomes a law. The third course is for the governor to give his approval to the bill by signing it within five days.

Governor Silem.
At the executive offices Tuesday afternoon, when the senate's action had been communicated to him, Governor Hardman informed newspapermen through his secretary that he would have no statement to make pending official receipt of the bill from the house with the signatures of the presiding officers.

FUND PROBE OVER, TENNESSEE QUIETS

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 10.—(AP)—The calm after the storm prevailed today in Tennessee's capital, center of the investigations into the state's financial stress.

It was the indictment by a federal grand jury at Greenville of Rogers Caldwell, financier; Colonel Luke Lea, newspaper publisher; and J. Basil Ramsey, president of the closed Holston Union National bank at Knoxville, on charges of violating the national banking laws that dwarfed other developments in the investigations. They were accused of conspiring to violate the banking laws and with actually violating them in connection with transactions of the Holston Union bank nearly a year ago. Ramsey returned to Knoxville today from a prolonged visit to his brother in Jacksonville, Fla., an accepted service on the two federal charges and on five state indictments alleging fraudulent breach of trust and larceny in the operation of the Holston Trust Company, of which he also was head. He furnished bonds totaling $50,000.

Federal officials at Nashville waited in vain throughout the day for rapinees from Greenville for Colonel Lea and Caldwell. Until these arrests, the authorities declined to allow the defendants to accept service and make bond. The papers were mailed yesterday afternoon, but the last mail today failed to bring them.

Caldwell yesterday made $50,000 bond on two state indictments charging various irregularities in connection with the handling of two Harman county bond issues by Caldwell & Company, of which he was head, and the Bank of Tennessee, a subsidiary of the investment house.

Richard M. Atkinson, district attorney-general here, said the investigation of the banking situation in Nashville is being pushed and that other indictments may be returned the latter part of the week.

The legislative investigating committee, which has been directing its powerful searchlight here, is not contemplating any change of policy in its relationship with Russia.

The recent decision of Secretary Stimson to begin a study of the Russian situation, it was said at the White House today, does not mean that President Hoover has any intention of adopting a new attitude toward the soviet government.

Secretary Stimson's purpose, it was said, is to broaden the information of the state department on the Russian situation and is in line with a determination to keep thoroughly informed on world affairs.

Dog That Barks Time To Man's Music Lost

One of the most talented dogs in the city, musically speaking, is lost. Or so it was reported to police Tuesday afternoon by W. L. Waters, of 188 East Hunter street, who asked that officers look for "Turk."

The animal is a German police dog and assists his master in making a living, it was stated. Mr. Waters plays a guitar, banjo and harmonica, all at the same time, and one of his special numbers is a hunting selection in which dogs bark. He has trained Turk to bark at the right intervals when playing this piece, he asserted, and unless he finds the 20-month-old puppy he can never play the selection again.

Indians Stage First Tomahawk Dance in 28 Years

ETHETE, Wyo., March 10.—(AP)—Indians in full war regalia of the Arapahoe tribe massed on the Shoshone sun dance grounds near here tonight for the first tomahawk dance in 28 years. It began at sundown. In the days when the west was the r-d man's domain the tomahawk dance was a warning the Arapahoes, one of the fiercest tribes west of the Mississippi, were preparing for battle.

The dance, with its attendant barbaric contests, lasting three days, eliminated the weaklings and brought out the prowess of the young braves best fitted to carry the Arapahoe war cry into the camp of the enemy.

Since peace has been declared between the tribes and the white man the dance has become an invocation to the Great Spirit to bless the Arapahoes with physical strength and power and in gratitude for health. The present celebration is in gratitude to the Great Spirit for health he has restored to the sister of Lester Pine, one of the tribesmen.

STATE USES $1,761,024 EMERGENCY ROAD FUND

Georgia has used $1,761,024.53 of her share of the emergency fund appropriated by congress to speed federal aid highway construction this spring, according to figures given out Tuesday by the bureau of public roads at Washington.

This leaves a balance still due the state out of this fund of $316,971.15, and this is expected to be taken up shortly, as the coming of warm weather as a factor in reducing unemployment speeds highway construction, it was ment.

PANTAGES LINKED IN 'LOVE MARKET'

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 10.—(AP) Complaints charging Alexander Pantages, rauderille magnate, and four other persons with violation of the juvenile court act in connection with the Los Angeles "love market" investigation, were issued here today by District Attorney Thomas A. Whelan.

Jesse H. Shreve, wealthy San Diego real estate man, surrendered voluntarily and furnished $25,000 bail on seven counts.

The others named in the complaints were John P. Mills, San Diego oil man; William Jobelmann, a publicity man and witness in Pantages' trial on a charge of assaulting Eunice Pringle, dancer, and Olive Clark Day, of Los Angeles.

Pantages, who was visiting at Agua Caliente, Mexico, denied the accusation in a telephone conversation, and said he would be glad to return if he was wanted.

The charges issued against the five defendants included conspiracy to violate the juvenile court laws, actual violation, conspiracy to attack and actual attack in the alleged bringing to San Diego of two Los Angeles girls, Helen Livingston and Lydia Nitto, each 16 years old. It was charged the girls were brought to San Diego by Jobelmann and Olive Day through the medium of Mills for Shreve and Pantages.

The alleged offense was declared to have taken place at a local hotel.

Shreve was the only defendant to appear in court when the charges were filed. Pantages was at Agua Caliente with Mrs. Pantages. He vehemently denied any wrong doing and was emphatically supported in this statement by Mrs. Pantages.

Shreve, Mills and Pantages have been partners here in several real estate enterprises. Mills recently left this city to reside in Los Angeles.

Shreve declared he was innocent of the charges and "would like to see" the girls named in them.

National Editorial Convention Value Told to Master Printers

Cancelling all of his other engagements and driving 115 miles from his home in Hartwell only to return immediately so as to be at his desk early this morning, Louis L. Morris, president of the Georgia Press Association, Tuesday night told the Atlanta Master Printers Club that the National Editorial Association convention to be held here in June offers Georgia the greatest advertising opportunity the state has ever known.

The dinner meeting of the Master Printers' Club was held in Rich's restaurant at 7 o'clock and was attended by more than 100 of the leading members of the printing business. The principal talks were made by Mr. Morris and by James L. Mayson, city attorney.

Mr. Morris told of editorial endorsement of the plans of the Georgia Press Association to publicize the state over the nation by The Constitution, the Journal, the Athens Banner-Herald, the Savannah Morning News and other papers.

He quoted J. K. Orr, one of the supporters of the venture, as saying that the publicity for Georgia in connection with the convention would be worth "at least half a million dollars to the state."

The meeting was presided over by John Harland and Mr. Morris was introduced by LeRoy Petty, of the Whitaker Paper Company.

Mr. Morris told how various states, realizing the advertising value of the convention and desiring to honor the editors of the nation, had bid for the convention.

"We even had to fight Alaska to get the convention for Georgia," he said. "We are trying to raise a special fund to sell Georgia to the world and to sell Georgia to Georgians. Hal M. Stanley, corresponding secretary of the Georgia Press Association, is treasurer of the special convention and publicity fund. This fund will be spent 100 per cent for propaganda and information about Georgia."

"This is Georgia's greatest opportunity to find her rightful place in the sun. We naturally expect everyone to cooperate and already individuals and firms are offering generously of their services. The publicity is to be prepared by L. K. Starr and Russell B. Whitman in cooperation with members of the Georgia Press association. Literature is now being gotten up and the information put in news form by Mr. Starr and Mr.

Whitman is being broadcast by E. D. Shirey of the Western Newspaper Union, without charge.

"The Georgia Press Association has secured the convention for Georgia. We editors naturally want to be host to fellow editors of N. E. A. whose membership comprises over 5,000 newspaper and magazine editors. At the same time we are conscious of the tremendous advertising value of the convention to Georgia and consider the convention an opportunity that could be gotten in no other way."

Following the talk by Mr. Morris Mr. Harland declared the convention "a marvelous thing for the state" and urged all members of the Master Printers' Club to promote the enterprise in every way possible.

Entertainment at the dinner was furnished by Rich's Mandolin Club, directed by Mrs. Reynolds Clark.

DOCTORS FIND NEW CURE FOR RICKETS

ANN ARBOR, Mich., March 10.—(AP)—The possible scrapping of present theories about vitamin "D" and the development of a new cure for rickets in children as a result of the researches of two University of Michigan professors was being discussed here today.

The investigations have been made by Dr. C. A. Lilly and Dr. L. H. Newburgh, who reported that to cure rickets in experimental animals it was necessary to add about four-tenths of one per cent of common sodium phosphate and a water soluble extract of brewer's yeast to the diet.

Rickets has long been recognized as a "deficiency disease" and research has shown that it was caused by a lack of the vitamin "D." Later investigations have shown that besides a lack of the vitamin "D" there also is a lack of either phosphorus or calcium.

"They did that. And again OLD GOLD won by a big majority. Voted the best for taste and throat comfort."

Help the Railways to recover their Earning Capacity

The general public does not seem to realize, or fully appreciate, that the railroads are not earning what their investment calls for, or even what the law of the land permits them to earn.

Under this law they may earn 5% percent on the value of their property (there is no "guarantee"), but for the past ten years they have never reached this in any single year, and the average for these years has been only slightly above four percent—a return entirely inadequate for a vital industry. This has resulted notwithstanding the railroads have reduced their expenses by 22.7 percent.

Among the causes for this shortage have been reductions in freight rates (amounting to 15.6 percent) and a decline in traffic due to competing forms of transportation—pipe lines, waterways, highways—which are either subsidized by governmental aid or are not tied down by the same degree of restrictions as to regulation, supervision and taxation that the railroads are.

The public is entitled to the form of transportation it prefers, but that preference should be expressed only after all conditions are considered. At present the conditions are grossly inequitable.

The railroads, because of their large investments, their important payrolls, their heavy purchases, their enormous taxes, and their indispensable part in the development and progress of this country, have some claim to public patronage if they can give satisfactory service—which they are doing. They have a right to equal and fair treatment. They have a right to urge that competitors in the public transportation business shall not be unduly favored. They have a right to ask for equal conditions in the field of competition. This they are asking for—and nothing more.

You can help them by traveling and shipping by train, and by insisting that they be given fair and just treatment.

ALABAMAN FOUND DEAD IN BATHROOM OF HOUSE

E. T. Brown, 20, Had Been Despondent Over Unemployment, Says Landlady.

The body of E. T. Brown, about 20 years old, of Anniston, Ala., was found Tuesday afternoon in the bathroom of a boarding house operated by Mrs. J. M. Chastain, at 1469 Athens avenue, where he had lived for the past few months, a bottle of poison and a note addressed to his mother lying nearby. Attendees at Grady hospital stated that he had been dead for several hours.

Mrs. Chastain told police that the young man had been out of work for the past three months and that he had shown signs of despondency for several weeks. He made two trips uptown, she said, during the day and returned for lunch, afterward retiring to his room. The body was discovered by Edna Haynes, 10, who was unable to open the bathroom door on account of the weight of the body pressing against it.

Two youths, called in by Mrs. Chastain, forced the door open and the body was taken to Grady hospital, where an inquest will probably be held. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

PUBLIC SCHOOL GAINS FOR TEN YEARS SHOWN

Graphic description of the phenomenal growth of the Atlanta public school system for the past 10 years featured the regular monthly meeting of the Atlanta board of education Tuesday afternoon as Willis A. Sutton, superintendent, unfolded a report prepared at the request of W. W. Gaines, president of the board.

The only other feature of the session was contingent purchase of a tract at Westmont road and Cascade avenue for location of a school. The purchase hinges on assurances from the borough and public service corporations that public services will be extended. A delegation favoring buying of another tract on Gaston street near Beecher appeared, but after a lengthy hearing the board voted to support Dr. N. H. Baird, commissioner from the seventh, who favored the Westmont site after a survey by the administrative department.

Miss Irene Passmore was elected a teacher, as was M. D. Wilkins, negro, Mrs. Margaret Love, Mrs. Ruth Hawkins and Miss Etienne Hanes resigned. C. W. Stephens, negro, also resigned.

The Sutton report was on the evolution and growth of the system since he assumed charge 10 years ago, and paid a tribute to former school officials.

In presenting the report, Sutton stated it showed the natural growth and was not in any manner intended to reflect anything but glory to past heads of the system.

UNFILLED ORDERS OF U. S. STEEL DROP

NEW YORK, March 10.—(AP)—Unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation decreased 167,157 tons in February to a total of 2,965,194 tons February 28. In January an increase of 188,755 tons was reported.

The back log as of January 31 was 4,122,351 tons. On December 31 unfilled orders aggregated 2,834,596 tons. November 30 the total unfilled tonnage was 3,630,636 and February 28, 1930, unfilled orders amounted to 4,478,748 tons.

A decrease was expected in financial circle because of the rise in operations during February and the smaller number of business days in that month for buying. It was pointed out that consumers apparently were awaiting definite indications of the spring trend before placing orders.

OPTIMISTIC OUTLOOK FOR COTTON GOODS

Proposal To Discontinue Night Work for Women and Minors Commended.

NEW YORK, March 10.—(Special.)—Optimism as regards future of cotton textile industry is forecast by R. E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., one of the largest consumers of cotton goods in America.

In a statement made public today General Wood congratulates the Cotton Textile Institute on success of its recommendation looking to voluntary discontinuance of night employment of women and minors in cotton mills of the United States.

This great reform measure, in the opinion of General Wood, indicates a "broad and liberal policy" on the part of mill executives toward their employees and moreover will prove a "boon to the industry from a strictly business standpoint" in relieving the problem of overproduction, which has been so characteristic during the past 10 years.

The attitude of the chief executive of this great mercantile establishment in Chicago, with cotton purchases approximating $14,000,000 annually, is similar to that voiced by many other consumers of cotton textiles since March 1, when this voluntary measure of discontinuing night employment of women and minors became effective.

General Wood's letter to George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, follows: "Permit me to congratulate the officers and mem-

Poster Judging Test To Open This Morning

Posters submitted by Georgia school children in the contest sponsored by the American Library Association will be examined by judges beginning this morning in the state capitol. It was announced Tuesday. The posters, all of which were made by school children, were placed on display Tuesday.

A first prize of $100, to be used in equipping the library of the school that furnishes the best poster, has been offered by the National Association of Book Publishers. In addition, there are two prizes of $50, four of $25 and five of $20 each, all prize money to be used in the purchase of school libraries.

The American Library Association also reserves the right to use any of the posters for publicity purposes, paying the makers of worthy posters $50 in cash. It was announced. Judges in the contest will be Miss May Haverly, Mrs. Julian Harris and Miss Ella May Thornton, state librarians.

bers of the institute for this constructive step. There can be no argument against this movement from humanitarian standpoint and from the long range view no industry can be permanently successful unless it employs a broad and liberal policy to its employees. But laying aside any humanitarian consideration, I believe that this step will prove a boon to the textile industry from a strictly business standpoint. For 10 years the industry has suffered from overproduction. A step like this that will at the same time accomplish a much-needed reform and eliminate some of this overproduction is bound to be of material benefit to the industry. The institute is to be congratulated on accomplishing this voluntarily without being forced to it by legislation, though I believe that sooner or later such legislation should be enforced."

Eaker Violates Superstition By Posing Before Speed Flight

Captain Ira Eaker, noted army pilot, who crashed Tuesday while attempting a non-stop transcontinental flight, is shown in the above photograph with Assistant Secretary F. Trubee Davison of the war department. Captain Eaker is on the right. The photograph was taken last year at Candler field where Captain Eaker refueled his ship on a hop from Washington to Maxwell field, Alabama.

LONG BEACH, Cal., March 10.—(AP)—One of his pet superstitions was violated by Captain Ira Eaker just before he took off here early today for the east on a speed flight that ended in a forced landing near Tolu, Kentucky.

He posed for photographs at the start of an aerial endeavor. Camera men were pleading with him. "All right, boys," he said, "I'm superstitious about this picture-taking before a flight, but you win."

With a glance of resignation at the battery of cameras, he shoved back his helmet. There was a dead calm as Eaker warmed up his motor and

Proposal To License Gambling Is Approved

CARSON CITY, Nev., March 10.—(AP)—A bill to license gambling in Nevada bore the approval of the state house of representatives today and was sent to the senate for action.

After long debate the measure was passed by the house yesterday by a vote of 24 to 11.

The bill would permit gambling under a license for each game and machine, the amount varying according to population of localities. Of the fees collected, 25 per cent would go to the state, 25 per cent to the county and 50 per cent to the cities and towns.

twice he failed to lift the ship into the air.

As mechanics pushed the plane back to the starting point after the second failure, the captain remarked:

"Oh, Lord, what I'd give for five miles of wind. I'll try it again."

A breeze sprang up to greet the wish; quickly the ship was put on the line, and with a roar the silver and yellow monoplane disappeared into the darkness at 2:43 a. m. coast time.

The flight was to determine whether a transport plane has been developed that will match speed with the fleet, fighting pursuit craft of the army.

One of the prerequisites for the successful maneuvers of military aviation in the future, the army foresees, will be ships that can carry commanding officers from sector to sector with as great speed as the pursuit ships.

Judging from the swiftness of Captain Eaker's monoplane, the arm would like 200-mile-an-hour transports.

The ship selected for the test was a Lockheed Vega, fastest of long distance commercial ships.

MOOR TO CONDUCT DIOCESE MISSION

The Rev. N. R. H. Moor, rector of St. Luke's church, will take advantage of what will probably be his last opportunity before leaving for Pittsburgh of holding a mission in the diocese of Atlanta by conducting a series of services nightly at St. Philip's cathedral, beginning Monday, March 23, it was announced Tuesday. The services will be held at 7:30 o'clock.

The object of the mission is to bring a message of cheer and courage and renewed faith to the community, it was said. No offering will be taken till the closing night when a free-will thank offering to cover incidental expenses will be taken. Interested persons are invited to attend the services.

The great Paris designer has turned out another creation. A model of good taste! But good taste is no less desirable in a cigarette. What you taste in Chesterfield is milder and better tobaccos—nothing else—in a blend and "cross-blend" that cannot be copied! Just as there is only one Paris... there is only one Chesterfield.

They Satisfy

FOR NINETEEN years, our Research Department has kept intimate touch with every new development of Science that could be applied to the manufacture of cigarettes. During this period there has been no development of tested value or importance to the smoker which we have not incorporated into the making of Chesterfield cigarettes.

M. Clemenceau Agrees To Keep Americans Separate at Front

Other Allied Leaders Admit Pershing's Plan of Battle Best; Lloyd-George Asks U. S. Troops To Remain With British.

I called on Prime Minister Clemenceau in Paris August 13, 1918, and told him of my visit to British army headquarters. We spoke of the progress toward formation of an American army. A record of what he said, as set down in my notes, follows:

"M. Clemenceau told me that when I first began insisting on using American divisions in an American army under an American command, he frankly did not agree with me, but that he wished to say to me now that I was right and that every one who was against me on this proposition was wrong; that he fully agreed with me now and that the Americans should operate separately as an American army."

We then discussed a telegram he had received from Lloyd George, endeavoring to arrange for a number of American divisions to be retained with the British. This message was handed to me by M. Clemenceau. In part, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"I did not ask for the transfer of American divisions to the British front. The brilliant part taken by them in the second great Marne victory has more than justified the use made of them. What I asked was that a few American divisions at most from among those recently arrived in France and who could not be put in the line without some training should be sent to complete their training behind the British lines. My purpose was to form a reserve capable of being used in the critical situation of a break on our front by the enemy, permitting the holding of our local reserves until the arrival of divisions from the general reserve of the Allied armies on the western front."

"I did not consider my demand excessive, for it must not be forgotten that the greater part of the American troops were brought to France by British shipping, and that because of the sacrifices made to furnish that shipping more than five divisions of the 28 now in France should be in training behind our lines."

We are informed that a serious attack on the British front is still probable now. I do not wish to hamper you now, but in the interest of that unit of command for which I made so great an effort I urgently ask you to support the very modest request made by me from our commander-in-chief."

Not only were the British anxious to get our units, but the whole question of the employment of American troops continued to be considered among the Allies. One program the British clung to contemplated the use of Dunkirk as the supply port for an American army they hoped would be sent to their front for service under their control.

M. Clemenceau told me the Italian ambassador and Mr. Lloyd George had been in conference in London regarding the disposition of our troops, the former urging that every influence be brought to bear upon Marshal Foch and myself to obtain divisions for Italy. This was not the first time the British had shown an interest in having our units go to Italy, having previously suggested that they be grouped with the British forces there.

Another proposal which was again submitted to Marshal Foch about this time by the other Allies was that of placing American infantry and other services in the reduced divisions of the British front. I explained to them that the British had shown an interest in having our units go to Italy, having previously suggested that they be grouped with the British forces there.

I took early occasion to explain my views to Marshal Foch, and convinced him that the suggestion of a supreme head for supplies was not practicable, at the same time urging an extension of the scope of authority of the inter-allied board as far as possible, without interfering with the machinery of supply behind each army.

The decrease in the number of transport arrivals at this time gave some apprehension. The successful handling of the immense quantity of cargo needed could only be assured by a constant flow of shipping from home ports. Improvement in the rapidity of discharging cargo was almost imperative at this time, as the arrival of others, there was danger of running still further behind in many things of which we were already short. Our imperative needs in motor transport, rolling stock for railways, construction material and signal supplies were not being met and yet they were as indispensable as supplies for the men.

At that moment, when we were asking the French to lend us trucks, they made the same request of us. We were actually short 1,300 automobiles, thousands of trucks, and all other kinds of motor vehicles. The ambulance situation was critical, several sanitary units were completely inadequate. Valparaiso Athlete Guilty of Murder

Virgil Kirkland, 20, is shown testifying at the "gin party" murder trial that he loved the 18-year-old victim, Arlene Draves, and that they were engaged to marry. His story, however, failed to save him from a life sentence.

was proving effective in solving a number of supply questions of greater or less importance. There was, however, a tendency to carry it beyond the limits of the original conception under which it operated, and the suggestion was presented that it be made general, with the entire control under one supreme head.

To get my views Marshal Foch sent one of his officers to discuss it with my staff, but I thought we had gone as far as safe in this direction. The question of handling our supplies was bound up with our system of ports, depots, and means of transportation to such an extent that the details of its control could not be delegated to any other authority.

While strategic control of the armies had been placed in the hands of the Allied commander-in-chief, the responsibility for their tactical direction necessarily remained in the hands of their respective commanders. If there had been a general mingling of units regardless of national integrity, there would have been a general mingling of the entire front under a single direction might have been logical. But it was only by establishing the principle of authority of the inter-allied board was made acceptable, as no commander-in-chief would forego control of his supplies any more than he would yield the military command over his army.

Foch Yields to Pershing's View.
The system of co-ordination was already doing excellent service, and in my opinion it was more satisfactory than any plan of arbitrary control could be. Among other things, such problems as procurement of labor, storage facilities and forage supply were in process of solution. A request for light railway material and of motor transport, though small, was being formed, and systematic methods of handling traffic were being studied.

I took early occasion to explain my views to Marshal Foch, and convinced him that the suggestion of a supreme head for supplies was not practicable, at the same time urging an extension of the scope of authority of the inter-allied board as far as possible, without interfering with the machinery of supply behind each army.

ORATORICAL CONTEST

Largest Number of Schools and Students Will Compete for This Year's Prizes.

With many of the high schools of the state holding their first elimination in the national oratorical contest Saturday, reports continue to pour into contest headquarters of intense interest among the boys and girls of the state.

The contest is sponsored in Georgia this year, as it has been for the past several years, by The Constitution, which has offered special prizes for district and state winners, which will be in addition to the prizes to be awarded in the national and international contests.

In a letter received Tuesday President D. V. Spencer, of the Sixth District High School Association, reports record interest in the contest. In part his letter says:

"The contest in the sixth district of the constitution of the United States will be held at the Spaulding County High School, near Griffin, on the evening of March 28. All indications are that more students and more schools will enter this year than ever before. From the largest high school in the district, Lanier High School for Boys, in Macon, down to the smallest high school in the district, practically all will enter this contest. Entries for this contest in oratory will close in about a week."

Leigh Makes Suggestions.
With the near approach of the preliminary eliminations, Randolph Leigh, director of the national contest, has issued a statement calling attention to the effect which the time limit will have on the speaking technique of the contestants. He expresses the belief that speakers should follow a somewhat different plan for the six-minute speech, as contrasted with the longer type of speech.

"The contest last year," he says, "proved clearly the effectiveness of the new language, and the utility of judiciously constructed sentences. In the first place, there must be a greater effort than ever to make the presentation of ideas. The sentences, even the very words, must be shorter, in order to secure the maximum result within the short time limit which will have on the speaking technique of the contestants. Fess Confers With Hoover On Plans for 1932 Campaign Committee Plans "Intensive Publicity" on Work of Administration; Idea Hit by Democrats.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—(P)—The machinery of the republican national committee will be thrown into high gear in an effort to acquaint the country with the work of the Hoover administration.

Plans looking toward 1932 were outlined today by Chairman Fess, after a call at the White House. He said, however, he would not go over the program with President Hoover until later.

A little later James Francis Burke, general counsel of the committee, issued a statement saying it would not meet soon because the country "is suffering from an overdose of politics."

Meanwhile, democrats and independent republicans assailed the announcement last night by Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the republican national committee, that an advisory council for agriculture had been formed to tell the farmers what the administration had done for them.

More Intensive Publicity.
Senator Fess said the committee plans called for more intensive publicity, the organization of subcommittees and the

NORRIS TO OPEN INSURGENT CAMP

National Leaders in Both Parties Look to Capital Apprehensively.

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON.
WASHINGTON, March 10.—(AP)—National leaders of both parties looked apprehensively tonight at the conference tomorrow of republican and democratic congressmen.

In the meeting to be presided over by the veteran Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, a foe of President Hoover, the politicians saw the foundation being laid for a third party—although such a purpose was vigorously protested by Norris and his colleagues.

Whatever its outcome, the meeting assumes lengthy discussion of national economic problems. It will be opened tomorrow by Senator Norris before about 125 participants and will continue through Thursday.

The Columbia Broadcasting System will carry the opening address tomorrow by Senator Borah, of Idaho, on agriculture and by Senator Norris on the poor issue.

Borah will speak tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and Norris at the same time on Thursday.

The National Broadcasting System will carry the opening address tomorrow of Senator Norris at 10:15 a. m.

No place has been made on the program for prohibition and the senate independent leaders who called the meeting have no intention of getting into this controversy, feeling they have plenty to do in disposing of the five topics listed for discussion.

These are: Agriculture, power, unemployment, tariff and representative government.

From the discussion, the leaders hope to draft a legislative program for presentation to the next congress in December—a congress in which this group holds the balance of power.

Preliminary discussions today on Capitol Hill developed that both the Hoover program and the democratic platform suggested last week by chairman, Raskob, of the national committee, are due for bombardment.

Because of the known opposition of the senate group sponsoring the conference to the administration's policies on economics and its apparent lack of interest in the Raskob platform, political leaders speculated considerably today over the third party prospects involved in the meeting.

Senator La Follette, republican, Wisconsin, whose father, the late Senator Robert M. La Follette, led a third party movement in 1924, will play a leading role in the conference. He will lead the round table discussion on unemployment, a question in which he took great interest last session.

Senator Borah, who broke with President Hoover over the farm relief issue at the start of this administration, will advocate the export devaluation principle of agriculture aid. The Idaho senator was not one of those calling the conference.

In addition to Senators Norris and La Follette, Senators Cutting, republican, New Mexico; Wheeler, Montanan, and Costigan, Colorado, democrats, are the group sponsoring the meeting.

Three-Minute Relief From Grippy Aches
When one of those grippy, aching colds come on, and you want immediate pain relief, go to any drug store or soda fount and ask for a package or dose of "B-C." Three minutes after taking, the pain begins to recede, your nerves are rested, fever reduced and comforting relief sets in.

"B-C" contains several ingredients that function together for the relief of pain (female pains included) regardless of its cause. It is unexcelled in a few minutes what no one drug formula can do under 1 to 3 hours.

In the treatment of raging headaches, sinus pains, neuralgia or earache due to colds, "B-C" is unequalled, being absolutely safe and free from opiates or habit-forming drugs.—(adv.)

Noted Surgeons Are Speakers As Congress Comes to Close

Prominent speakers on the final day's session of the Southeastern Surgical Congress. Dr. George W. Crile (left) noted Cleveland surgeon and clinic director, whose recent creation of "test-tube life" has been one of the most sensational items of medical experimentation, and Dr. William Wayne Babcock, Philadelphia surgeon and professor of surgery, who was the concluding speaker on the program, are shown here. Dr. Babcock, noted exponent of spinal anesthesia, was in Atlanta for the first time since residence here from 1917 to 1919 as head of the surgery department at Fort McPherson. Staff photos by George Cornett.

That the advancement of medical practice and surgery in the south has been given its greatest impetus through organization of the Southeastern Surgical Congress, was the opinion expressed by Dr. William Wayne Babcock, noted practicing surgeon of Philadelphia and professor of surgery and clinical surgery at Temple University, who addressed Tuesday afternoon brought the second annual assembly of the congress to a close.

Dr. Babcock is well known in Atlanta from the war period when he headed the surgical department of Fort McPherson, which had been designated as one of the country's general hospitals. Dr. Babcock is one of the nation's leading exponents of the use of spinal anesthesia for surgery and his adaptation of the method at Fort McPherson, when its utilization was relatively in its infancy, attracted wide attention in the medical world.

Prominent surgeons who preceded Dr. Babcock at the closing session Tuesday afternoon included Dr. Robert C. Coffey, who flew by plane to the congress from Portland, Ore., where he is clinical professor of surgery at the University of Oregon. He read a paper at the congress dealing with transplantation of ureters into the large bowel when necessary to eliminate the bladder as a reservoir of urine.

Dr. J. Shelton Horsley, surgeon of St. Elizabeth's hospital, Richmond, Va., read a paper on "The Kinetic System and Its Control," was that the "higher organ," the frontal lobe which is the driving force of human beings, has been driving man ahead at too rapid a pace, frequently causing a breakdown of other organs of the body, which are inferior to those of the lower animals.

Dr. Hugh H. Young, leading urologist and clinical professor of that field at Johns Hopkins, lectured on the final session.

Most noted speaker of the Tuesday morning program was Dr. George W. Crile, Cleveland surgeon whose research into "test-tube life" is regarded as one of the most astounding developments of recent medical experimentation. One of the points stressed in Dr. Crile's talk on "The Kinetic System and Its Control," was that the "higher organ," the frontal lobe which is the driving force of human beings, has been driving man ahead at too rapid a pace, frequently causing a breakdown of other organs of the body, which are inferior to those of the lower animals.

KILLING ADMITTED BY AGED INDIAN
BUFFALO, N. Y., March 10.—(AP)—Nancy Brown, 65-year-old Seneca Indian woman, today pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of manslaughter, first degree, in connection with the slaying of Mrs. Clotilde Marchand in her Buffalo home a year ago.

The plea was entered before County Judge F. Bret Thorne, who did not immediately fix a date for sentencing of the aged woman. The law provides a penalty of imprisonment not exceeding 20 years for this offense.

Nancy originally was indicted, together with Lila Jimerson, Cayuga Indian woman, who was acquitted a week ago, on a charge of murder, first degree. She testified for the state in the prosecution of Lila, admitting that she beat to death Mrs. Marchand, wife of an artist with whom Lila was on intimate terms. Nancy insisted, however, that she murdered Mrs. Marchand only because the younger Indian woman had said she was a "white witch" and that all Nancy's relatives would die unless Mrs. Marchand was removed.

There was little interest evinced this morning in Nancy's case, in contrast to the crowded courtroom which marked Lila's trial.

ABUSIVE LANGUAGE CHARGED TO LOEHR
Councilman H. Turner Leach, of the first ward, Tuesday was indicted by the Fulton county grand jury on a misdemeanor charge of using abusive and opprobrious words to John T. Lee, of 708 Windsor street, city sanitary truck driver, on Wednesday of last week.

Lee, known as a supporter of Jim Simpson, assistant sanitary chief of the city, who was let out of the service recently by Loehr's sanitary committee.

Grayson submitted to the charge in federal court yesterday.

LARCENY FROM HOUSE CHARGED IN TRUE BILL
Arthur Bales Tuesday was indicted by the Fulton grand jury on a charge of larceny from the house. The true bill alleges that Bales took $300 in cash and a $250 diamond ring from the home of Mrs. Edna Nesbitt, 503 Washington street, S. W., on July 7, 1930.

W. R. Reid was indicted on a charge of murder of John Cooper, negro, who, according to police reports, was called to his front door at a Valentine street address on March 6 and shot down.

DECATUR POLICE, FIRE CHIEF NEAR DEATH

Little Hope for Recovery of M. D. Googer Following Transfusions.

Little hope was entertained for the recovery of M. D. Googer, chief of the police and fire departments of Decatur and one of the most widely known figures in the public life of DeKalb county, it was learned Tuesday night. Chief Googer, after two blood transfusions at Wesley Memorial hospital, where he was taken Monday night, Tuesday was reported to be in extremely critical condition.

Complications resulting from a severe siege of influenza were responsible for Chief Googer's condition. Upon his arrival at the hospital Monday physicians deemed an immediate transfusion necessary, and Marcus Googer, son of the veteran DeKalb official, volunteered to give the necessary blood. A second operation was performed later, with D. B. Broome, member of the Decatur fire department, donating the blood.

Tuesday evening all members of the family were at the bedside of the stricken chief.

Dry Enforcement Up to States, Leader Says at Convention

Problem One of Education, Dunford Tells Delegates at Meeting in St. Petersburg.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 10.—(AP)—The prohibition enforcement problem, basically, is one of education, Edward B. Dunford, Washington, attorney for the Anti-Saloon League of America, tonight told the association's annual southern convention here.

The major burden of enforcement, he said, rests upon the state government, with such assistance as the federal government can offer.

"National sobriety," he declared, "will not be won on the hustings but in the home, the school and the church. The propaganda glorifying liquor and condoning and lauding the bootlegger, the rum runner, as well as their patron, will prove ineffective in the light of truth."

Nothing short of outright repeal of the 18th amendment would satisfy the wets, he said, while prohibitionists believe the evils growing out of alcoholism cannot be cured under any plan authorizing legal sale of liquor.

"Between the viewpoint of the radical wet on the one hand, and that of the prohibitionist on the other," Dunford said, "there is no compromise that can succeed."

Ben Spence, prohibition leader of Toronto, explained that the Canadian system of government-controlled liquor traffic and described what he said were the evils of such a plan. He said the drink bill of Canada last year alone amounted to $102,000,000, the largest in the country's history.

"But Canada has to pay a further enormous price in all the ruin caused by alcoholism," he said. "The shame and sordid misery, the woe and want, the drunkenness and crime, the immorality and vice, disease and degradation, the depreciated efficiency in industry, the waste of time and of physical and mental power by the present generation are only part of the price paid for alcoholism, which carries with it an inescapable entail of degeneracy to the coming race."

Dr. A. J. Barton, Wilmington, N. C., for 20 years chairman of the executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League, warmly espoused the cause of prohibition, denounced Alfred E. Smith and John J. Raskob, and declared any effort on the part of the democrats to name a wet presidential candidate for the 1932 election would be bitterly contested.

"The southern democrats will not run with Raskob and will not be tied to the tail of the Tammany tiger," he declared, "if the democrats put forward a wet candidate we will fight even stronger than when we defeated Smith. We will not have to be whipped into line; we will fall into line of our own accord."

Dr. Barton bitterly assailed the recently announced proposal of Raskob for state control of liquor.

"Although Raskob did not say he wanted repeal of the 18th amendment," Dr. Barton said, "that is what would have to be done if his plan were put into effect."

In a spirited address Dr. Gifford Gordon, of Australia, who has made a study of the liquor question for 20 years, declared he was convinced prohibition is the only practical way of solving the problem. The rest of the world will not become dry, he said, until the United States itself becomes dry.

Don McMullen, Tampa prohibitionist, also denounced Raskob and Smith and declared that "if the democrats nominate a wet next time we are going to help flog them just like we did last time."

"If Al Smith has not brought into the democratic party a Greek wooden horse in the form of John J. Raskob," he added, "then I am sadly mistaken."

Sydney C. Brown, collector of customs at Tampa, declared the 18th amendment was just as much a part of the constitution as the preamble itself.

"And man who attempts to modify the constitution, he said, 'is not an American. We need men who will stand up for enforcement. All we want is an honest effort and that is what we are going to give you.'

DEPOSITORS IN CLOSED BANK TO GET $300,000

Immediate Cash Payment to Depositors in Decatur Bank and Trust Arranged.

Approximately $300,000 in cash will be paid to depositors in the closed Decatur Bank & Trust Co., as a result of the agreement, consummated this week, whereby the Fulton National bank will buy at face value a portion of the assets of the closed bank. This figure is 57 1/2 per cent of the total deposits, it was stated.

The Fulton National plans to open a Decatur branch bank in the former quarters of the Decatur Bank & Trust Co. within the next 10 days or two weeks, after the offices have been thoroughly renovated.

A corporation is to be formed to take the residue of assets of the defunct bank and liquidate them for the benefit of its depositors. This corporation, it was explained, will issue to the depositors a note and voting certificate for the balance of the assets based upon their holdings in the bank. The amounts secured by this liquidation corporation will be disbursed to the depositors pro rata. Upon the success of the liquidation will depend the final percentage the depositors will secure.

Directors of the liquidation corporation are Augustus Sims, chairman; Scott Candler, Luther Randall, J. J. Scott and Louis Estes.

THE RETURN OF REDSHOULDER.

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Where ever the traveler may roam His thoughts will ever be of home, —Redshoulder the Hawk.

Redshoulder had spent the winter in the Sunny South. He and Mrs. Redshoulder had been very comfortable down there. They had made part of the journey in company with a number of their own people and it had been made in easy stages uneventful save that now and then there would be the bang of a dreadful gun and their company would be one less in number. Usually it was one of the younger members who lost his life, one who had not yet had opportunity to learn that for no reason at all the hand of man is against all Hawks, and the big Hawks especially.

It would have surprised Redshoulder to know what to those men with the dreadful guns he was simply a Hen Hawk, to be killed because he caught the hens and chickens that belonged to these men, whereas the truth was that he hadn't tasted a hen or a chicken more than once or twice in his life, and had paid for these a hundred times over by destroying the mice that stole the grass and grain and girdled and killed the young fruit trees of these same men.

But so it was and Redshoulder had ever to be on watch for these ignorant killers with their terrible guns. He and Mrs. Redshoulder had grown wise with experience. They had learned not only to avoid these terrible guns, but also to avoid sitting on tall poles, for they had seen many of their relatives caught in cruel steel traps placed on the tops of the poles for this purpose.

For a long time they circled high above all this and they were filled with the great joy of home-coming. Then they set their wings to sail down to that part of the Green Forest where their nest was. It was Mrs. Redshoulder who first saw that all was not as it should be.

"There is someone in our nest!" she screamed indignantly, and swooped down with an angry sounding hiss of stiff wing feathers.

Redshoulder was close beside her. Sure enough, in that nest were two half-grown birds that they at once recognized as Owls. Mrs. Redshoulder swooped as if she would drive those interlopers and throw him from the nest, but a great brown bird with round, fierce, glaring eyes alighted on the edge of the nest with wings half spread, ready to meet any attack. Mrs. Redshoulder changed her course abruptly and wheeled upward. Then for an hour or two angry screams, hissing and the sharp snapping of angry bills made that part of the Green Forest anything but pleasant. Hooty had joined Mrs. Hooty close by the nest, and together they kept guard at their heads turning with every move of the two big Hawks.

At last from sheer weariness the Redshoulders quit. It was useless for them to try to get their home back and they knew it. So they alighted on a tall tree some distance away to rest and talk matters over. This home-coming had not been what they had thought it would be. They must make new plans.

A POPULAR TWO-PIECE "ENSEMBLE."

7121. A jaunty little model is shown in this illustration. It comprises a one-piece sleeveless dress, which has attractive fullness arranged in plaited inserts in back and front, and a small V neck which may be finished with lace or ribbon. A narrow belt holds the fullness at normal waistline. The jacket is cut on box lines and fitted with shoulder darts. The fronts are lined and turned back to form revers that meet a small coat collar in notches. Serviceable pockets, and a one-piece sleeve, with small upturned cuff completes this chic effect. Shantung or linen white or pastel shades is suggested for this ensemble. The jacket could be in contrasting material. One could also use jersey or tweed. Canvas shoes also suggested.

Designed in 3 sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. A 16-year size will require 5 1/2 yards of 39-inch material. The jacket alone will require 2 1/2 yards. The dress alone will require 3 1/3 yards. To line the jacket will require 1 3/4 yards. The tie will require 3/4 yard. Mrs. Hooty close by the nest, and together they kept guard at their heads turning with every move of the two big Hawks.

Modern Youth Is Defended By Students at University

Annual Anniversarian Exercises of Demosthenian and Phi Kappa Literary Societies Held.

ATHENS, Ga., March 10.—Modern youth was defended and the lack of interest in literary societies scored by speakers at the annual anniversarian exercises of the Demosthenian and Phi Kappa Literary Societies at the University of Georgia chapel this morning. The Demosthenian Society celebrated its 130th anniversary and the Phi Kappa its 110th. Dean S. V. Sanford presided.

The anniversarian exercise is the high spot of the year's activity in the literary societies, speakers representing their societies in this event having attained the highest speaking honor given by the organizations.

Marvin Cox, Waynesboro, represented Phi Kappa speaking on "Modern Youth," and Charles Hope, Gainesville, represented Demosthenian. His subject was "The History of Literary Societies at the University of Georgia." Sam Dorsey, of Atlanta, introduced Mr. Cox and Emory F. Robinson, Ochlocknee, introduced Mr. Hope.

Solve Own Problems.
"Education, to which America in its democracy seems prone, should demand that we produce individuals and not rubber stamps," Mr. Cox said. He urged that youth be allowed to judge its own problems, rather than to depend absolutely on the older generation's judgment. If there is anything wrong with the youth today, he said, it is because everything is wrong with the older generation. The youth of today has a poor model. "I do not mean to contend that a young man should break off from the thought or advice of his father," Mr. Cox said. "He should be acquainted with the mores of action which his elders have selected in order that he may meet and judge for himself the decisions which the older people have arrived at. He should rather than blindly follow him. He should be like him rather than imitate him—otherwise, why educate youth?"

Replying to the charges against the irresponsibility, immaturity, recklessness and lack of respect for authority and traditions of youth, Mr. Cox asked: "Why do our elders talk about us, when they have so much reforming to do themselves? Any faults of our generation are merely the reflected faults of our fathers. Youngsters have a tendency to imitate what they see about them, and what they see about them is not always the best. What can our fathers do to the offspring of divorced parents? Is it the fault of such youngsters that they are reckless and irresponsible? What can one expect of children reared in a home where the interference so often imputed to the young characterizes the very father and mother. The son finds his father's country club locker filled with whisky, who is to blame for the drinking of the younger generation?" "What can one expect of children in a family where none of the in-

MRS. POWERS SOON TO BE TRIED AGAIN

Aged Woman To Face Jury Second Time in Alleged Murder Plot.

MACON, Ga., March 10.—(AP)—With the arrival of the Georgia supreme court's official announcements, giving Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Powers, 74, a new trial for murder, it was said Tuesday at the office of the solicitor-general that the second trial will be held probably during a two weeks' session of court beginning March 30.

Though the higher court granted the new trial some weeks ago, the official action of that body was not recorded here until today with the arrival of the court's remittitur.

When the aged woman is placed on trial a second time, charged with implication in the murder of James W. Parks, 18-year-old orphan printer, the preliminary matters which consumed so much time at the first trial will have been eliminated. Judge H. A. Mathews ruled on them at the first trial and was upheld by the supreme court, it was said. The supreme court granted the new trial on Judge Mathews' failure to convince the jury on circumstantial evidence.

Parks was killed on the night of May 27, 1929, Earl Manchester, Rochester (Mich.) youth, is condemned as the actual slayer. Mrs. Powers is charged with having planned the murder and promised to pay Manchester to commit the crime.

NEW CHAPLAIN NAMED FOR 118TH ARTILLERY

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 10.—(AP)—The Rev. C. C. J. Carpenter, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, is the newly appointed chaplain of the 118th field artillery with the rank of captain.

He succeeds the Rev. Silas Johnson, who is now living in Thomasville where he is presiding elder of the Thomasville district in the South Georgia Methodist conference.

The Irish Jasper Greens, Battery "E" of the regiment, has invited Major General E. G. Peyton, now commanding the Thirtieth division of national guard troops, to attend its eighty-ninth annual banquet on March 17.

Interests of educated and cultured people prevail; where a father's only interest is the latest quotation from the stock market, and the mother's greatest interest is the latest book on contract bridge? In a world where "Big Bill" Thompson is elected mayor of a great city; where automobile manufacturers are inventive geniuses and worshipped as oracles, and where every pronouncement is hailed as gospel by the front pages of our press; where high church dignitaries stoop to political intrigue and where the present generation of young people has seen the greatest political corruption since the tragic era go unpunished? How in such an atmosphere can we hope to hold our young generation to a high moral standard?

The discouraging fact, said Mr. Cox, is that the older generation refuses to allow the younger to arrive independently at its own conclusions.

Lack of Interest Deplorable.
Mr. Hope deplored the lack of interest in literary societies in America during the present century. "Literary societies are but shadows to the past," he said. "In the past, 1,900 students of the University of Georgia attend the meetings. The situation here is paralleled in practically every American college and none the less in the south, where we have always been the stronghold of literary societies." Leadership is especially stressed in these societies, Mr. Hope said. Students, Georgia's future leaders, should take advantage of the training in leadership and public speaking offered by the societies.

Mr. Hope reviewed the history of the two societies, Demosthenian and Phi Kappa, from the time of their origination in 1801 and 1821, respectively. The time when the citizens of Athens complained of the loudness of the debaters of the societies was recalled, and the time when a motion to adjourn an all-day meeting of the club a half-hour before sundown was defeated in the Phi Kappa meeting.

With no athletic teams or extra collegiate activities to entertain their attention, the entire student body would attend the literary societies' meetings, which lasted all day Saturday in 1830. Speakers would deliver with the utmost enthusiasm into political, religious, social, scientific, psychological and historical questions. Beginning early Saturday morning the sessions would sometimes last until Sunday morning. Judging from the length of the debate and profundity of the subjects debated, an incredible amount of study and effort must have been expended by the participants and nothing was too abstruse for them to attack.

To Die in Chair

Allen Vestberry, who Tuesday was convicted of the murder of Mrs. Hettie Browning last August, will die in the electric chair.

The verdict of the jury did not recommend mercy, which means that Vestberry must die in the electric chair.

Allen Vestberry, who Tuesday was convicted of the murder of Mrs. Hettie Browning last August, will die in the electric chair.

The case today was given the jury about 1 o'clock and the verdict was returned after deliberation of about three hours.

Arguments began yesterday afternoon following rebuttal testimony in which T. O. Sturdivant, Atlanta police lieutenant, testified for the state concerning his presence in Thomas county jail when Austin Vestberry and Homer Padgett confronted Allen Vestberry. Sturdivant said Austin Vestberry they had told everything and advised him to do likewise.

When the jury announced the verdict Allen Vestberry said he was innocent of the crime as a new-born baby, and "they have convicted an innocent man."

The jury in the trial attempted to show Allen Vestberry was not in the vicinity of the killing at the time the crime was committed.

WESTBERRY TO DIE FOR SLAYING WOMAN

VALDOSTA, Ga., March 10.—(AP)—A jury in Lowndes superior court late today found Allen Vestberry guilty of murder in connection with the slaying of Mrs. Hettie Browning last August in a killing state robbery.

There was no recommendation for mercy and the verdict automatically carries the death penalty. Judge W. E. Thomas recessed court, immediately after the verdict was received, without passing sentence.

Mrs. Browning's husband, W. H. Browning, also was slain during the robbery and four other men were indicted and are being held in connection with the slaying. Austin Vestberry has been convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment in connection with the crime.

B. W. M. U. CONVENTION CONVENES IN FORSYTH

Mrs. W. J. Neel, State President, Principal Speaker at First Session.

BY MRS. L. O. FREEMAN.
FORSYTH, Ga., March 10.—The forty-ninth annual meeting of the Baptist Women's Missionary Union of Georgia, now in convention at Besse Tift College here, was addressed at its opening session Tuesday by Mrs. W. J. Neel, of Cartersville, state president.

Looking forward to the close of this, the golden anniversary year of the organization of the union, Mrs. Neel chose for her subject "Finishing the Course." Her theme was an urge for "an accumulation of Christian power for the final spurt that will bring the Georgia union to the end of the fiftieth lap of the race with shouts of triumph and rejoicing because of the worthiness of the goals attained and the victories won."

For 10 successive years this body has been presided over by Mrs. Neel, who is one of the outstanding leaders and speakers of the denomination in the south. This convention, representative of more than 40,000 Baptist women of the state, will outline the policy and plan of work for its constituency for the next year.

An inclusive resume of the aims and accomplishments of the southern union was given by Miss Kathleen Mallory, executive secretary of the B. W. M. U. of the south, and distinguished guest of the convention, her address, "What the W. M. U. Is Doing That the World May Know Him." Miss Mallory's address, having for its theme, "Joy in the Journey," was an inspiration to the hundreds of women who filled to overflowing the college auditorium where all sessions are being held.

Financial Statement.
In her financial statement Mrs. A. F. McMahon, secretary-treasurer, reported the total gifts of the union for the year through the Georgia convention's program of co-operative missions, to have been $199,144.48. Special offerings through weeks of prayer were $5,303.88; missions, $8,220.69; $8,032.74, home missions; $9,420.69, foreign missions.

An important question to come before the convention Wednesday for action relates to the findings of a special survey committee, and the recommendation of the state executive board that because of recent changing conditions and financial problems the Mary P. Willingham school be discontinued at the close of the present school year. Mrs. Mary P. Willingham School for Girls at Blue Ridge, Ga., has been owned and operated by the state Baptist Women's Missionary Union since 1910. Another vital matter for discussion concerns the suspension of further gifts to the Besse Tift endowment fund for the summer of 1931, and indefinitely thereafter, until such time as in the judgment of the Women's Missionary Union an increase in all gifts will justify the resumption of this work.

The keynote of the convention, "To Know the Will of God," was heard in the opening worship hour led by Dr. T. W. Ayers, pioneer in medical missions to China, and one of the best known and most beloved of southern Baptists. Convention musicians are: Mrs. James W. Lott, Americus, song leader; Mrs. Taul White, Rome, soloist; Mrs. Mary Telford, Besse Tift, accompanist; organist.

Delegates Welcomed.
Delegates and visitors were welcomed to Forsyth and Besse Tift by Mrs. Fred Stokes, president of the Forsyth County Baptist Women's Missionary Society; Mrs. A. W. Bramblett, president of the local Methodist Women's Missionary Society, and by Mrs. Aquila Chumley, wife of the college president. Mrs. J. H. Cheatham, Griffin, made gracious response. Officers in attendance upon the convention are: Mrs. W. J. Neel, president; Mrs. George Westmoreland and Mrs. J. C. Lanier, vice presidents; Mrs. E. C. Laird and Mrs. F. D. Burge, recording secretaries; Mrs. A. F. McMahon and Miss Mary Christian, corresponding secretary and secretary of young people; Mrs. B. L. Bugg, auditor.

A delightful social event following the business session of the convention Tuesday afternoon was the informal reception in honor of Miss Kathleen Mallory, executive secretary of the southern union and distinguished guest of the union. Mrs. W. J. Neel, W. M. U. president, acted as official hostess of the occasion. Receiving with Mrs. Neel and Miss Mallory were the officers of the union. The reception was held in the spacious parlors of the college which were artistically decorated with masses of ferns, daffodils and other bright spring flowers.

Habersham County Officers Recover Part of Bank Loot

This photo shows part of the damage caused by a dynamite blast in the Baldwin State bank, which was set off by yeggs.

CORNELIA, Ga., March 10.—Habersham county officers announced Tuesday recovery of $140 stolen from the Baldwin State bank Saturday.

What the NEW HUMIDOR PACK *means to Camel Smokers

COMPARE a package of Camels with any other cigarette and note the difference in the technique of packing.

Note that Camels are completely enclosed in an outer transparent cover of moisture-proof cellophane and sealed air-tight at every point.

We call this outer shell the Humidor Pack. It differs from the ordinary cellophane pack and while it is egg-shell thin, it means a lot in terms of cigarette enjoyment.

It means, for instance, that evaporation is checkmated and that Salt Lake City can now have as good Camels as Winston-Salem.

While Camels are made of a blend of the choicest Turkish and mellowest domestic tobaccos, it is highly important, if you are to get full benefit of this quality, that these cigarettes come to you with their natural moisture content still intact.

The Humidor Pack insures that. It prevents the fine tobaccos of Camels from drying out and losing any of their delightful flavor.

Aside from cheap tobacco, two factors in a cigarette can mar the smoker's pleasure:

Fine particles of peppery dust if left in the tobacco by inefficient cleaning methods sting and irritate delicate throat membrane.

Dry tobacco, robbed of its natural moisture by scorching or by evaporation gives off a hot smoke that burns the throat with every inhalation.

We take every precaution against these factors here at Winston-Salem.

A special vacuum cleaning apparatus removes dust and now the new Humidor Pack prevents dryness.

Check the difference yourself

It is a very simple matter to check the difference between Humidor Packed Camels and other ordinary dry cigarettes.

First of all you can feel the difference as you roll the cigarettes between your fingers. Camels are full-bodied and pliable. A dry cigarette crumbles under pressure and sheds tobacco.

If you will hold a cigarette to each ear and roll them with your fingers you can actually hear the difference.

The real test of course is to smoke them. And here's where the new Humidor Pack proves a real blessing to the smoker.

As you inhale the cool, fragrant smoke from a Camel you get all the mildness and magic of the fine tobaccos of which it is blended.

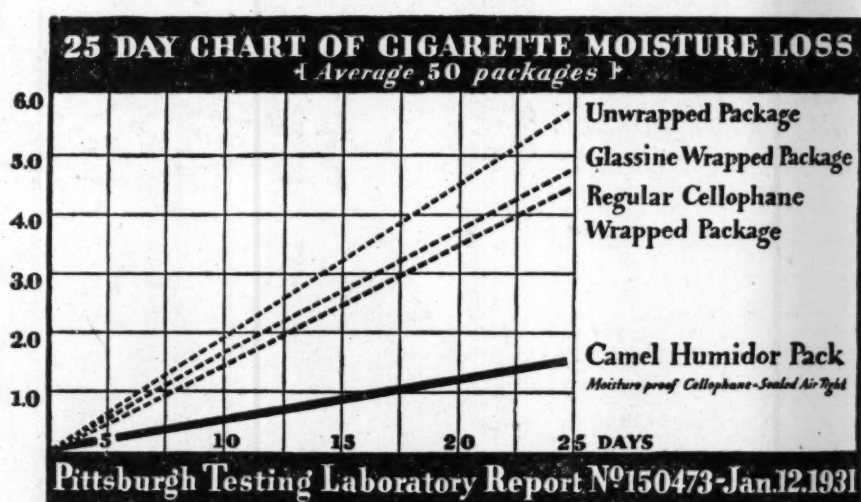

But when you draw in the hot smoke from a dried cigarette see how flat and brackish it is by comparison and how harsh it is to your throat.

If you are a regular Camel smoker you have already noticed what proper condition of the cigarette means.

But if you haven't tried Camels in the new Humidor Pack you have a new adventure with Lady Nicotine in store.

Switch your affections for just one day, then go back to your old love tomorrow if you can.

Miss Van De Vrede Interprets Ideal Community Nursing Service

Through the annual observance of National Business Women's Week the attention of the public is drawn this week to the activities of business and professional women throughout the country, and particularly to those of the local clubs of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women since this organization inaugurated National Business Women's Week some four years ago.

The Atlanta club is presenting a series of short articles on the achievements, service records and activities of its members, and today gives an interview with Miss Jane Van De Vrede, R. N., a past president of the local club, first vice president of the American Nurses' Association and executive secretary of the Georgia State Nurses' Association. Miss Van De Vrede's knowledge of matters pertaining to health and to nursing service makes her competent to discuss these subjects, which are of interest not only to business women, but to the public generally.

An interpretation of nursing and especially the ideal nursing service for a community, Miss Van De Vrede explains as follows: "The ideal nursing service should include service to the entire community and from the standpoint of prevention of illness as well as cure; a visiting nursing service in addition to private nursing in hospitals and homes. Visiting nursing can be so organized as to render an hourly service with a minimum of cost to the patient. Such a service is needed in Atlanta, in addition to the service secured through the nurses' registry and the public health agencies."

In reply to the question, "What is the greatest problem before the nursing profession today?" Miss Van De

Vrede says: "It is an economic one. The relation of nursing to other costs of illness has not been determined; but if good nursing shortens the stay of the patient in the hospital; if it hastens his recovery and permits him to more quickly re-establish himself as a productive member of society, then it is an economy in time and money, as well as comfort and satisfaction."

"The nurse herself is faced with a great economic problem. She has been tremendously affected by the unemployment situation due to the economic depression, but this situation is merely the 'peak' of a condition known to have existed for some time among nurses. The average nurse for the past several years has been employed only a little over seven months out of each year. The cause is overproduction of nurses. Nurses have been graduating from training schools in such large numbers that the ratio of the population of the country to the demand for nursing service is not in proportion. The employment of more graduates and the graduation of fewer nurses annually is the only solution of this problem."

Miss Van De Vrede gave as her definition of a "good nurse," "one who is a disciple of health from the day she enters the school of nursing; who brings to her professional training the cardinal traits of good character, a keen mind and a sympathetic nature, dominated by common sense. She must be honest and brave, and have a sense of humor; she should also have a sense of the dignity of labor, the joy of service, the divine in nature. As to preparation, at least graduation from high school plus a thorough technical knowledge is essential in order to interpret the orders of the physician and translate them to the recovery of the patient."

TALKING IT OVER

BY CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

If You Put a Pan of Whole Milk in the Refrigerator the Cream Will Rise to the Top in Spite of All You Can Do; If You Leave It in the Kitchen, It Will Do the Same Thing.

MY DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

My family has been unable to boast of any distinction of any sort. We have been plain, hard-working country people and very respectable.

My youngest brother won a scholarship to college and got to be one of the crackbrains in his college. This gave him a big send-off and, being ambitious, he took advantage of every opportunity that came his way. He is now a successful professional man in a distant city. He has outgrown his family and I believe he would be embarrassed to bring any of his friends to visit us.

My oldest son's daughter will graduate from the high school this spring and I am making plans to send her off to college. Due to hard work, and consistent thrift, I have saved enough money to give her the education she needs. I am strapped up in her and want her to have the best life has to offer. I cannot decide whether to send her to a state college or to enter her in one of the famous schools in the east, where she will take on more polish and probably end up as my brother has; educated beyond her family and separated from us by a wide gulf. What would you think the wisest choice?

MINNIE.

ANSWER:

You know, if you live in the country, what happens when you put a pan of whole milk in the refrigerator. The cream rises to the top of the pan. You also know what happens if you put a pan of skimmed, or separated, milk in the refrigerator. Nothing. It remains as it is, blue and thin. If there is cream in the milk's make-up it will rise to the top, no matter where it is getting her education. Education is the matter of pure mount impulse and the polish is, as the word implies, the rubbing down to a bright finish of the hard surface that is formed by the education. The polish may be acquired by her education, but there is only one way to get it. You should pick out a school that is qualified to give your niece the best instruction suited to her. Don't allow the social contingency to blind you to the real value of the school. An experience like the one you describe with your brother has, no doubt, rendered you supersensitive about the social phases of schools.

The social graces which are simply the oil that smooths the machinery of social intercourse are not to be inherited, and, when they are, so much the better; but they may be acquired, as we well know from our own observation, acquired by contact with those who have them or acquired by reading about those who have them, and reading what they say about those who have them. Education is the matter of pure mount impulse and the polish is, as the word implies, the rubbing down to a bright finish of the hard surface that is formed by the education. The polish may be acquired by her education, but there is only one way to get it. You should pick out a school that is qualified to give your niece the best instruction suited to her. Don't allow the social contingency to blind you to the real value of the school. An experience like the one you describe with your brother has, no doubt, rendered you supersensitive about the social phases of schools.

He laid down some rules of conduct for society which have never been equalled for clarity and comfort. He said it was a mistake to put any one in a position in which you would not yourself enjoy being put. He said that unless you were willing to be misjudged, it was not safe to be judging other people for one always got back what one put out. He emphasized kindness, gentleness and truthfulness and unselfishness, and he told everybody who asked him the secret of his successful living. It was simple enough for a child to understand and complex enough to puzzle the interest of the wisest of men. He laid down a short time to spend here and a long time to spend somewhere else. The time spent here is the time of preparation for the larger life; and happiness in the long period depends on the way we prepare ourselves during the short period. He mapped out the preparatory course and gave it to us in that volume of which I spoke.

I shouldn't send my niece to any school where the philosophy of that volume and the culture of that mind didn't permeate the curriculum.

Manhattan Night

By William Almon Wolff

INSTALLMENT XXIX.

"Go south—over to Park and south," he ordered.

It was Martha—Martha, white and trembling, but free!

"I don't understand, Peter," she said. "But it's all right, I suppose."

"It's going to be!" said Peter, elated. Even this momentary, temporary triumph over Connolly delighted him; it represented action, at least. Now, if Connolly held his hand for another hour, and, according to Charlie, there was every chance in the world that he would, since he could hardly have anticipated any need to special haste, they might bring it off!

The cab turned east at 40th street, went south, then down Park avenue, and turned, in the tangled traffic above Cooper Square, to go west on Ninth street to Peter's door. The veil hid Martha's eyes; Peter's doorman nodded respectfully.

"Good morning, Mrs. Wentworth," he said.

There was a witness—and one who, since he wouldn't know he was lying, would be a hard one for Connolly to confound, assuming that he followed the trail. They shot up to Peter's floor; even Manuel took Martha for Carol. He looked amazed, and his white teeth gleamed, when Martha raised her veil and he recognized her. Martha and Tack had dined at Peter's often.

"Into my room with you—get into bed," said Peter. "Carol'll be here any minute, and take your clothes."

Alone with Manuel he explained. Manuel's smile was wider than ever. He was a quick-witted little devil, and he would have committed murder, probably, with the utmost good will, if Peter had asked it of him; complicity in a trick like this only amused him. He and Peter stood behind the door, which was left ajar, for five minutes Carol, a little out of breath, pushed it open and came in. She was laughing.

"It worked!" she said. "Wasn't it lucky this suit had just come? I've never worn it before! And thank heaven veils are coming in! I just sailed in, downstairs, and said, 'Mrs. Porter, I'm expected!' and they never even thought of announcing me."

"Get changed and get out of here, quick," said Peter. "Martha's in my room."

Excitedly he watched his sister disappearing through the door of his room. Luck had been with them, so far. If it held Carol would be home again, in the clothes in which Martha had gone out, before Connolly arrived; even if the trick that had been played were suspected there was nothing, probably, to lead Connolly here. Conceivably he might take a chance and turn up here to make a search, but Manuel was already primed for that possibility, and the new fashion of a service entrance even for small flats in good houses was going to help. He blessed this modern life that had left his sister, older than Martha by a good 12 years, he supposed, and the mother of two children, with a figure like a young girl!

Carol had gone, with a hasty kiss for Peter, within ten minutes, and he knickered on his own door and went in, at Martha's assuring word. She was lying down, fully dressed, except for the hat, in Carol's new suit.

"I feel terrible," she said with a faint smile. "I suppose it's only natural! Oh, Peter—it's all so dreadful, and I haven't the time to think of that, even, with all this excitement. Tack—"

"He'd want you to be thinking of yourself right now—not of him," said Peter. "Lord, I don't mean to be heartless, Martha, and it makes me sick whenever I have time to stop and think about Tack, too. But the first thing we've all got to do, for his sake as well as ours, is to get you out of the jam you're in."

"Has anything happened since last night—anything I don't know about?" said Martha. "I must have, I suppose, or they wouldn't—they wouldn't be ready to arrest me."

"Plenty's happened," said Peter.

grimly. "Some things I know about—a lot more than I don't. I'll tell you as much as I can." He looked at her. "If you're up to it," he added.

"I'm all right as long as I lie down," said Martha. "Tell me, Peter."

Choppy, because so much of it was still vague and confused in his own mind, he told her what he had learned at Emma's this night before. About his talk with Meyer Zahn, first of all. That made her furious; it was the first time since, on the roof, she had burst stormily out with one charge that they were trying to blame her for Tack's death because that was easier than trying to find who had really killed him that he had never let angry, seen a flash of her old spirit, of the real Martha.

"That's disgusting!" she said. "He—oh, I've gone to him, I know, and I depended on him too much, I suppose. But that! How dare he think I did it? How dare he?"

"I wanted to paste him in the jaw myself," said Peter. "But—well, I didn't. You can't, somehow, when you know a man can't fight back—and wouldn't if he could."

"I don't understand, though," said Martha, puzzled. "He knows better, Peter—he must! He knows I didn't do it. He knows I couldn't. He knew how fond I was of Tack, somehow. Not—not by what he actually said, so much, but the way he got my mind to working."

Peter went on, quoting what Zahn had said, as well as he could remember.

"That isn't true," she said, once, interrupting. "He did give me advice. Not in so many words, ever—no. But he put things in my head I wouldn't have thought of for myself. He was the one who made me feel that it was right for me to—to—"

"She hesitated," Peter said, then went ahead. "To love Evan," she said. "I thought that was terrible, when I was married, even though Tack and I weren't making a go of things."

"How much did you tell him, Martha?" Peter asked, curiously.

"Oh, everything!" she said. "You just think about, you know, you lie there and say whatever comes into your head, whether it makes sense or not, and he sorts it all out. It—it would be rather frightful if you could not trust a man like that. I—"

"I've thought that myself," said Peter, rather grimly.

"Oh, yes—he knows as much about me as I do about myself," Martha went on. "I told him all about Benny, for instance."

"What did he think about that business?" Peter asked, looking at her.

"He didn't. He thought it was better to pay him. He agreed that Tack would make a frightful row if it got to him."

"I see," said Peter. "Well—that's where I go on record as disagreeing with one high-priced psychoanalyst! You'd come to me—Benny got after me last night, too. That—I guess that's the most important thing I've got to tell you, Martha."

And, leaving nothing out, he told her of Benny's demand and of the threats that had backed it up.

"It's out, though," he said. "I told Charley, and I told Bouton, and they won't stand for it. Any idea of what he's driving at about the gun?"

"Only this," said Martha, her eyes drawn together in a puzzled frown. "There is a place in the apartment where something could be hidden. We took Tack penthouse from Perry, March, you know—his abroad now. And he had a safe built in and hidden. He used to keep a lot of valuable papers that he had to be able to get at quickly, sometimes, out of banking hours."

Jackets To Seek Practice Games With Atlanta and Reading

'JUG HANDLER' MORRISON SIGNED BY CRACKERS

Frankie Zoeller, the Half-Pint, who used to scamper up the right field bank at Spiller field and rob left-handed hitters of three-baggers, looked at the new, green, home run fence at Spiller field yesterday and wagged his head.

"Guess it's just as well that I am not playing out there this year," he said. "That fence would spoil all my fun. Boy, I remember one game when I went up there and got three drives off Joe Hudgens, that big first baseman of Memphis. After he hit No. 3 at me and I got it half way up the bank he came right on out there after me. Gee, he was sore."

Frankie says that Roy Carlyle will hit plenty over that fence this year and added that Hudgens would have averaged two a game.

It is an eloquent commentary on the state of the baseball business that such a fine outfielder and lead-off man as Zoeller is at liberty.

MARSHALING THE SURVIVORS.

Kid Clay, the coach, and Ike Farmer, the catcher and unofficial chief of staff, put their heads together over a sheet of yellow paper yesterday and did some figuring.

What might be called an emergency exists in the Georgia Tech baseball situation. The Dixie College baseball league campaign opens four weeks hence and the Yellow Jacket squad has been neatly trimmed of five of its best players.

Coach Clay and Catcher Farmer were talking over a tentative line-up for the varsity team. Really there was not much to talk over because there were not many available players to be placed. A month ago, when the baseball call was issued, the Yellow Jackets were rated high in the newly organized group of college teams.

Since then the following experienced players have been removed from the squad for one reason and another: Ray Drosnan, pitcher and captain; Bill Strickland, pitcher; Scott Pullen, infielder; Earl Dunlap, pitcher and outfielder; Tom Jones, first base and outfield.

The Engineers will have to make the best of an awkward situation this first year of the Dixie collegiate circuit.

BLUE LARKSPUR'S GAMENESS.

Blue Larkspur is coming back. The great colt who was "rained out" of the 1929 Kentucky Derby will return to the races this summer. He has been entered by his owner, Colonel E. R. Bradley, in several stakes at Arlington.

Blue Larkspur, considered to have the 1929 Derby at his mercy, floundered in the mud and trailed Clyde Van Dusen home. He came on afterward to win the Withers, the Belmont and the Arlington classic. Then he bowed a tendon and went home to get well. He recovered gamely and came back to the track again to win the Stars and Stripes and the Arlington Cup. Then he broke down again.

That Blue Larkspur is returning once more after two breakdowns shows him to be a thoroughbred of superb constitution and a great heart.

NEW OWNER INVADERS TURF.

It was getaway day at Hialeah. Not all the wearers of owners' badges could win the last day and there were feed bills to be paid. So several chunks of crowd bait were put up at auction at the race track where for 40 days they had been trying and trying for the amusement of Miami winter visitors.

Ed Douglas, known in Georgia as a promoter and manager of boxers, had just cashed a ticket on a long-shot and had, as they say, a roll. He bought three nags for a total outlay of $75, and for the first time in his colorful career became as much a horse owner as Colonel Bradley or the Whitneys.

He promptly sold two of his St. Bernards for $90, which left him a net profit of $15 and one race horse whose future was in the racing form. So he has shipped his "stable" to St. Johns, they say, and has applied for an owner's badge. The next chapter in the career of Ed Douglas, turfman, may prove interesting.

HERE THEY COME!

Pa Stribling, from the advantageous position in an E. A. T. plane flying from Miami to Atlanta, reported that the Dixie highway was a one-way street now north-bound.

HELP! HELP!

Aid for Iowa Probe Refused by Griffith

CHICAGO, March 10.—(P)—Major John L. Griffith, athletic commissioner of the Big Ten, today declined to turn over to a committee of the Iowa state legislature investigating charges of maladministration at the University of Iowa, any official documentary evidence dealing with the university's ouster from the conference in 1929.

Epworth Court Meet Will Open Saturday

A double-header at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon on the Atlanta Athletic Club court will open the third annual Southeastern Epworth League Union basketball tournament. Nashville and Atlanta boys will start the activities at Birmingham and Chattanooga will follow.

CRACKERS, KEYS SOUGHT AS FOES FOR TECH TEAM

Clay Busy Grooming Replacements for Holes on Jacket Staff.

Spring practice games with both the Atlanta Crackers and the Reading Keys will be sought by R. A. Clay, Georgia Tech baseball coach, for his Yellow Jackets.

A series of informal games every day with one or the other teams will be arranged, Coach Clay said, if agreeable with Johnny Dobbs and Clarence Rowland, managers of the two professional clubs that will train at Spiller field this month.

Coach Clay has quite a problem whipping a team into shape from a squad that has been riddled by injuries and faculty rulings. He is anxious to have his club ready to make a good start in the new Dixie College Baseball league, of which Georgia, Florida, Auburn, Mercer and Oglethorpe are the other members.

A tentative lineup of the Yellow Jackets this spring would look something like this:

Catchers—Ike Farmer and Jimmy Dawson.

Pitchers—Fred Baker, "Loose" Everett, Leon Mitchell, Bob Henderson, "Sheriff" Crowley and "Ready" Williams.

Infielders—Fred Holt, first base; Bud Ritchie, Al Mathis, second base; Ray Isaacs, Jim Drennon, shortstop; Bill Hoged, Joe Robert, third base.

Outfielders—Duck McKee, Edward Waldrup, Rod Harper.

Those men are just about all. The Jackets are short of reserves for both infield and outfield positions now with Tom Jones, Earl Dunlap and Scott Pullen out for the season.

Coach Clay hopes to have his squad playing regular games by the end of the week. The squad was forced indoors Saturday and Monday by cold weather.

Bulldogs Prep For Mack Tilt

ATHENS, Ga., March 10.—Faced with a game with Philadelphia's top champion Athletics just 21 days from now, the Georgia baseball team today started work anew after a day's lay-off due to inclement weather.

Practice started last Thursday, all uniforms were issued the first day when 40 men reported for the first workout—and still a few candidates continue pouring in from undergraduate ranks. "New men have to furnish their own uniforms until Coach Bill White has a chance to get more suits or weed out the squad. It's a hard problem that faces Coach Bill White—one that probably won't be decided until along about the first of April.

Pitching weakness continues to worry Bill White as he preps his men for their chance at the mound. A's great Lefty Grove included among the lot that's coming here, Bill White will probably take his pitchers down on the field and let the great Lefty give them a few pointers in how to pitch baseball, and if George Earnshaw is feeling particularly well on the A's convene here, Coach White may be able to get him to instruct the Bulldog corps of right-handers.

Four complete infielders greet Bill White as he starts his search for infield practice, and right now the Georgia coach is considering hiring a couple of assistants to smack the ball to a couple of the infield combinations. With 18 infielders to choose from Coach Bill is almost ready to resort to a "lot" choice. Maybe the selection task will be easier after practice progresses awhile.

Ten youngsters in the outfield are showing ambitions to step into the shoes of Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, or possibly this South Georgia native, Slim Owens. Ben Hilburn, Slim Culbertson and Buster Mott are outstanding applicants for the outfield assignments.

And Bill White has a few good catchers on the squad. Carter Tate was a regular last fall, and Arnold, Kent, Edmondson and Bishop give prophecies of better playing in the future.

Jacket Boxers Will Seek Titles Friday

Finals in the annual Georgia Tech boxing championship tournament will be held at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon and at 8 o'clock Friday night in the Tech gymnasium. There will be 18 bouts on the Friday afternoon program in the semi-finals. Winners and those who draw byes in the semi-finals will meet for the titles Saturday.

Mike Chambers, Georgia Tech trainer, is in charge of the tournament and is working daily with the youngsters in final preparations.

All of the fights will be under American Amateur Union rules. Those pugilists in the finals include:

105-pound—Scottas, Norton.
115-pound—McNichols (champion), Shahan, Owens.

125-pound—Elliott Thompson (champion), Urquhart, Carson, Rip Harde-man.

145-pound—Merry (champion), Freyer, Berlin, Brewitt.

155-pound—Engelinger, Max Morris, Hungerford, Joslin.

175-pound—Adams, Kroner, McGowan, Branch.

Heavyweights—Neblett, Ben Cherry, Lackey.

FOX WILL FACE PAXOS TONIGHT

Cleveland Ready To Give Hellenic Foe Rough Evening.

Tonight will be a rough night on the Greeks, who have been smiling smooth Hellenic smiles of superiority since they have always put forth those boys to one of my rifles. I hear he asked Weber to have the referee hold me down, but I'm going in there to give him every bump in the book. If he won't stand it, he'll just have to jump out of the ring.

Both the main match boys have appeared before Atlanta fans many times before, and whether winning or losing—they have always put forth their best efforts and provided plenty of action. They are bound to go after another from the first going to night. Paxos, on the basis of his last appearance here, when he showed himself as a much improved wrestler, is the faster and more scientific of the pair, but Fox makes up in ruggedness and aggressiveness what he lacks in finesse.

Scarcely less of a drawing card than the main match is the one-hour semi-final which pits another Greek, in George Zaharias, against Charlie Lehman, the wild man from Texas, who drew Beloff and gave Paul Jones all sorts of trouble for 45 minutes in his last two matches here. It happens, however, that both of these boys are out of the state for the night, while Lehman's opponent tonight yields nothing to Daviscourt, Fox, Marvin or any other of the villains of the ring.

He lost a match to Paul Harper here not long ago, it will be recalled, on a foul when he refused to accept repeated warnings from the referee. Whether or not he has learned his lesson will appear tonight, for Lehman—with his whirlwind, unorthodox style of attack—is not a foe calculated to bring out the sweetness in one's nature.

A 15-minute preliminary will open the card, which gets under way at 8:15 o'clock. Tickets, which are going fast, remain on sale at the Piedmont Hatters and the Candler building soda fountain. Ladies, as usual, will be admitted for $1 to any seat in the house.

'Don't Duck, Mister, It's Just a Southpaw'

Hearn and Francis Open Fire With "Pup Guns" As Crackers Seek Cover.

By Ralph McGill.
RAY FRANCIS and Bunny Hearn, members of the left-handed lodge, are going armed.

They appeared at the Cracker clubhouse Tuesday afternoon armed to the teeth with rifles about the size of toothpicks. Ray Francis halted outside the clubhouse and fired a salvo of left-handed bullets at the underside of the stands.

Bunny Hearn shouldered his rifle and marched into the clubhouse.

THIS arming of the left-handers is a serious matter. The rifles, while small, appear to be vicious weapons which fire five shots by the simple pressure of a finger on some sensitive spot on the rifle.

It is thought that jealousy may be rearing its noggin in the Cracker clubhouse. The Maine moose hunter, Climax Blithen, has been in the public prints for some time. He is right-handed.

"Are those things rifles?" he asked in a sardonic voice as he peered at the guns with which the left-handers were armed. "I would be afraid to show those toys to one of my rifles. They look like they might be the pups of some 30-30 bear gun. Maybe they are pup guns. Left-handers are funny that way."

A Moot Question.
"WHERE are the moose hunter's horns?" asked Bunny Hearn. "I mean where are his moose horns?" No hunter ever killed a deer or a moose that he did not have the horns mounted. We will not believe that Climax Blithen has killed a moose until he nails the horns up over his locker.

The rival hunting camps have also reached an impasse on the matter of the scarcity of game. "I understand that the moose hunter is also circled. A few weeks ago the entire council on athletics was abolished at the university, Dr. Mercer was appointed director of physical education and given full authority to choose his own co-eds."

Harmann, who succeeds J. R. Ludlow at Penn, was released to night, Dr. Mercer stated, from his contract as football coach and athletic director at the Sewanee, Tenn., institution to accept the appointment at Pennsylvania. The contract had two more years to run.

Harmann is a protégé of Glenn Warner. He was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh and later received a master's degree in political science at Pennsylvania. He was a star linebacker on the Pittsburgh gridiron team.

The new Penn gridiron mentor started his coaching career at the age of 21 at Haverford College, remaining there for eight years.

Four-Ball Tourney Finals Slated Today
MIAMI, Fla., March 10.—(UP)—Gene Sarazen, New York, and Johnny Farrell, St. Augustine, Fla., 1929 champions, and Whiffy Cox, Brooklyn, and Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., will meet in final play tomorrow for the $25,000 International Four Ball golf championship.

Sarazen and Farrell ousted Tony Madero, New York, and Densmore Shoop, Columbus, Ohio, 4 and 3, in semi-final play today. Sarazen, providing most of the advantage, Farrell bettered or tied his mate in six holes, however.

Cox and MacFarlane were forced to the limit to beat that combination of money-winners, Walter Hagen, Detroit, and Horton Smith, Cragston, N. Y. The score was 2 up.

GOOD YEAR SEEN FOR OLD PIRATE STAR ON MOUND

"Twenty-Win Season" Forecast for Morrison as Squad Drills.

By Ralph McGill.
John Dewey (Jug Handle Johnny) Morrison will return this spring to the league where he got his baseball start in 1919. The Crackers signed the curve ball veteran to a 1931 contract yesterday.

It was announced exclusively in The Constitution of February 22 that Morrison had opened negotiations for a job with the Cracker curving corps. Correspondence followed, and he signed contract of the veteran pitcher arrived Tuesday.

Morrison, one of the greatest curve ball pitchers the game ever had, left the Brooklyn club last spring in one of his fits of temperament.

HURT ROBINS.
Had Morrison stayed and pitched the base, it he did in 1929 the Brooklyn Robins would have breezed right through to the flag. It was the collapse of the curvers in the race down the stretch that did the Robins out of the pennant.

Frankie Zoeller, former Cracker outfielder, was present at the training quarters of the Crackers when the news was received Tuesday.

"He'll win 20 games," said Frankie Zoeller. "He is still a great pitcher. I saw a lot of the Brooklyn players last fall and they told me that his jug handle curve was as quick-breaking as ever."

As Frankie Zoeller talked on, John Dobbs' eyes became brighter and brighter.

JOHNNY HOT.
"I'll bet he wins 20 games," repeated Frankie Zoeller.

"I'd better go get him today," said John Dobbs as he tapped his feet rapidly on the floor. John Dobbs figures that if he can find a pitcher who can win 15 or 20 games he will win the flag. Morrison is expected in Atlanta by the end of the week.

KORRICK. Morrison, who started with the Pirates in 1919. He went to the Pirates in the latter part of the 1920 season. The Robins took him back into his batting practice. He led them the next season. Last year he played semi-pro ball at Owenboro, Kentucky.

THE Cracker session Tuesday was a good, long one that saw Cracker sign up and enter the ranks. He, too, returns to the league after an absence of some years. The year Tuesday saw the signing of the veteran pitcher to the Cracker team in 1924. Jim Battle, who was with the Crackers for a time last year before being sent to Columbus, also was among the signing total players in camp to 20.

STICK DRILL.
The Crackers took their first batting practice of the year Tuesday. Roy Carlyle, the Norcross product, gave the new outfield fence of the Crackers its baptism of fire. The first man up in batting practice, he batted off two and then sent one screaming over the fence, the first one to be hit over it.

He was followed a few minutes later by Jim Hammond and the rookie powerhouse slammed one over even farther than Carlyle. They were getting balls right down the groove. The fence is going to be tough this year when the pitchers are hearing down and pitching to weaknesses.

Ernie Kreuger took his first workout of the year Tuesday. The veteran was greatly impressed by the work of Lowell (Felix) Douglas, the El Dorado pitcher.

GOOD DELIVERY.
"He has a good motion and a delivery that will worry the batters. It is a semi-side arm delivery that hits the ball well until it is turned loose."

Chick Autry, who is one of the help sent down by the White Sox, brought along a few words of Johnny Ryan, shortstop, and Bob Weiland, pitcher, who will be left at Atlanta by the White Sox when they come through on April 7. Both are good men, says Autry.

Rube Marquard busied himself tending to the pitchers, taking Johnny Carthens, the University of Georgia pitcher into the class room for a few lessons and giving the others a preliminary once-over.

SHERIDAN SEEKS POST.
Sheridan Smith, former Cracker pitcher, and last season manager and pitcher for the Cracker club in the Georgia-Alabama league, was at the field seeking R. J. Spiller's aid in landing a managerial position in the newly-formed Dixie association.

Maury Shannon, who is seeking a Cracker trial, talked terms with officials Tuesday but reached no agreement. He was with the Jersey City club last season as shortstop and utility man.

The Shannon twins were well-known in baseball a few years ago. Maury is left alone in the game now, the brother having quit it for the position of athletic director in a city park up east.

N. G. I. C. Meeting Slated for Today

Three Major League Holdout Stars Reported on Trading Block

TERRY, MORGAN AND REYNOLDS STILL UNSIGNED

Morgan Only One Who May Really Retire From Game.

NEW YORK, March 10.—(UP)—Three outstanding stars of the 1930 baseball season—Bill Terry, Carl Reynolds and Ed Morgan—are reported to be on the major league trading block. The three athletes are stubborn salary holdouts and have been threatened with suspension or a change of locale unless they sign contracts at terms offered by their respective clubs.

Terry and Reynolds depend upon baseball for a livelihood but both are stubborn and it is likely that they will be seen this year with clubs willing to meet their salary demands. Morgan has outside interests and the desires of his parents and his recent marriage may influence him to quit baseball.

EDDIE MAY QUIT.
Morgan, after two years in the outfield, was converted into a first baseman last season and became one of the American League's best infielders. He led the Cleveland team in hitting with an average of .350 and knocked 26 home runs. When offered a contract this season, Morgan demanded $200,000 and said he would retire to manage his father's box factory in case his terms were refused.

Cleveland has a capable first baseman in Lew Fonseca and is unwilling to meet Morgan's terms. It is rumored that the Indians are seeking offers for Morgan but with Eddie planning to retire after another year or two regardless of salary, it is improbable that he will don a uniform this season.

Terry, generally regarded as the best first baseman in the game, is asking the New York Giants for a three-year contract at $30,000 per season. The Giants have countered with a "final" offer of a one-year contract calling for $22,500.

Suggestions that Memphis Bill will be traded sound ridiculous but in view of previous trades which sent Rogers Hornsby, Lefty O'Doul and Burleigh Grimes to other clubs it would not be surprising to see Manager McGraw trade the man who is needed to make the Giants a pennant contender. McGraw is reported to be enthusiastic over the ability of Sam Rice.

ANY BUT CUBS.
Owner Stouffer is reported ready to trade Terry to any club except the Chicago Cubs. The Cubs, St. Louis, Brooklyn and Pittsburgh are the only teams which could afford to meet Terry's salary and the latter three are well fortified at first base. Brooklyn is reported to have refused to trade Terry for Babe Herman, even up while St. Louis is uninterested in an offer which would deprive them of Jim Bottomley and Douthett. Pittsburgh would like to trade Terry but the Giants' price involving the sacrifice of Paul Waner in addition to Gus Suhr.

Reynolds, young White Sox slugger, was included with Babe Ruth and Al Simmons in all-star American league outfielders last year and now wants a salary in keeping with his ability. The Sox, notoriously a low-paying club, have offered him $10,000 in response to his demand for $25,000.

Reynolds' prospects of getting even $15,000 from the Sox are remote and he probably will be traded. Connie Mack is reported willing to swap Reynolds for Al Simmons but the Sox unquestionably would balk at Simmons' $35,000 salary and doubtless will prefer to secure several low-priced players.

THE SPORTLIGHT

By Krautman Rice

ONE of the most interesting developments of Yale's spring football practice, now under way, will be the school of quarterback strategy, which Coach Stevens and his aides are now launching.

Yale is lucky to have as smart a field general as Benny Friedman on the scene, for it is doubtful if football ever knew a smarter director than the former Michigan star.

There has been a feeling for some years that Yale has been badly shy in quarterback strategy since the days of Lyle Richeson on Mallory's team. Since Richeson left the Eli turf there has been no outstanding general to provide the necessary tactics and strategy that the modern game demands. Few realize the tremendous importance of a Friedman or a Carideo. Such directors are far apart and the team that gets one even approaching this standard is lucky up to the hilt.

It may be impossible to develop the strategy needed for a great quarterback unless part of the genius is born within. But Yale feels that it is quite possible to make a good quarterback from the instructions given in the right school.

It is for this reason that all Yale quarterbacks for 1931 will be put through a thorough schooling during the spring practice. This is something that Yale, especially, and several other institutions have needed for some time.

Quarterback Value.
THERE is another instance of a quarterback value. It is shown in the case of Dodd, of Tennessee. Dodd was a match for Carideo in this respect. If Dodd had been at Notre Dame and Carideo at Tennessee, Dodd would have been unanimous.

Haughton and Rockne. PROBABLY no two coaches ever worked harder over a quarterback strategy than Knute Rockne and the late Percy Haughton.

Haughton had a set of smart quarterbacks directing Harvard's attack through most of his rule, and they were not the results of any accident. He worked with them at every chance, on and off the field.

As a result, Haughton's quarterbacks were among the smartest in the game. He refused to let them be ball carriers or to figure in any part of the attack that might upset their physical and mental balance.

Nap Rucker Tries Out Some New Bats.
Nap Rucker appeared at the Cracker practice Tuesday with some bats he had turned out in his workshop at Roswell. The bats were made from some sort of neilander's farm. The bats appeared a little thin in the handle and Nap went home to try again.

Reading Manager Expected in Today.
Clarence Rowland, manager of the Reading Keys, will reach Atlanta tonight. Several of his players are expected in during the day.

The Keys will train here for about three weeks. A schedule of exhibition games will be arranged with them by the Cracker management as soon as the Keys get settled.

The main body of the Crackers, outfielders and infielders, is expected in Thursday.

The Old Wham.
THE Athletics still have the old whack or wham. They still have Cochrane, Simmons and Fox. And if these three have an off day Bing Miller or Mule Haas is not to be overlooked in a pinch.

They still need one more winning pitcher to join Grove and Earnshaw, but even with moderate pitching the big punch is still there. And no one team ever had as many batters who are always dangerous in a pinch.

They have at least five men on the Athletics who are likely to break up a matinee at a moment's notice, and the heavier the pressure the more dangerous these five are. If Wallberg happens to regain control and step into a pretty good year, it will take a lot of baseball to keep this delegation from their third pennant in a row. And that doesn't mean possibly.

Baseball Song.
"McGraw fears the Cardinals"—and so do the Cubs.

But Brooklyn just the three of them are just a lot of dubs.

PREP BIG FOUR ORGANIZATION IS COMPLETED

Riverside Joins Purples, Smithies and Cadets in Meeting.

By Roy White.

Organization of a Big Four prep league was perfected Tuesday night at a meeting of representatives of Tech High, Boys' High, Georgia Military Academy and Riverside Military Academy, of Gainesville.

W. O. Cheney, of Tech High, was named president. Other officers include H. O. Smith, of Boys' High, vice president, and Douglas Woodward, of G. M. A., secretary and treasurer.

The new association adopted in full the constitution and by-laws of the Georgia High School Association and all contests will be played under the state rules.

Following a short discussion of the various activities for the remainder of the year, it was unanimously voted to participate in baseball, track, swimming, tennis and golf. Boxing was also included in the discussion but was not favored, as neither G. M. A. nor Boys' High are training in leather-pushing pastime.

Baseball occupied the majority of attention. It was voted to play a home-and-home schedule of two games with each team, making a total of 12 games to be played. The baseball season will open April 11 and continue through May 20, all postponed games must be played on or before the closing date of the schedule.

G. M. A. and Riverside will be hosts in the opening round, meeting Boys' High and Tech High, respectively. All games except those postponed will be played on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

W. O. Cheney was appointed chairman of the baseball committee, with Smith and Woodward as the other members.

Woodward was appointed chairman of the swimming committee, and May 15 was set as the date of the first meet.

C. S. Ward, of Boys' High, was named chairman of the track committee, and May 8 was the date selected for the event. The tennis and golf tournaments will be held May 9. Sand Beaver, of Riverside, was named chairman of those committees.

Colonel Beaver was host at the meeting. Immediately after the meeting was over a discussion of night baseball followed and plans for the erection of lights on a playing field will be completed.

The baseball schedule follows:
April 11—Boys' High at G. M. A.; Tech High at Riverside.
April 15—Boys' High at Tech High; Riverside at G. M. A.
May 9—Boys' High at Riverside; Tech High at G. M. A.
May 12—Tech High at Boys' High; Riverside at Tech High.
May 16—Boys' High at Boys' High; Riverside at G. M. A.
May 19—Riverside at Boys' High; G. M. A. at Tech High.
May 20—Boys' High at Tech High; G. M. A. at Riverside.

Score Cards Asked Of Women Golfers
A series of monthly tournaments to be sponsored by the Atlanta Woman's Golf Association will start early in April on the Capital City course. It has been announced by Mrs. J. C. Wright, chairman of the tournament and handicap committee.

Every member of the association together with others who desire to participate in tournaments sponsored by the members is requested to turn in at least five score cards by March 25. The scores must be made on the home course and must be attested and signed by both the players and partners.

As soon as the score cards have been turned in to the handicap committee, handicaps for the season will be figured and applied in the first tournament.

ROBIN REGULARS LOSE.

YANKS BEAT BRAVES.
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 10.—(AP)—The old-fashioned squeeze play gave the New York Yankees a 6-to-5 victory over the Boston Braves in the second of their spring series today.

Going into the last half of the eighth with the score tied, the Yankees loaded the bases and then caught the Braves napping as Lou Gehrig rolled a b. at down along the third-base line. A. J. Jorgens romped home with the winning run.

Joe Sewell, former Cleveland infielder, led the Yank attack with three singles while Combs poked out a home run. Jorgens was tapped for two runs in the ninth. Before the game, Mack used three juveniles on the mound. Lou Krausse, Al Butcher and Jimmy Beeshing hurled three innings each. Beeshing was tapped for two runs in the ninth. Before the game, Mack announced that George Earnshaw, his world series pitching star, would continue his spring training at Hot Springs and would not appear in any of the Florida exhibition games.

PLAYERS-MANAGERS FADE.
PENSACOLA, Fla., March 10.—(P)—The decline and fall of the player-manager in major league baseball is a logical happening, according to Owner Bob Quinn, of the Boston Red Sox.

He points out that nine major league clubs had such pilots six years ago and today Rogers Hornsby, of the Chicago Cubs, is the only one remaining in service.

"The chief reason," Quinn said, "is that the star player finds it difficult to be a successful manager because he has so little patience with the shortcomings of youngsters and less skillful men on his club."

OUTFIELD "FIND."
WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 10.—(P)—Hal Lee, the outfielder part of the big deal between the Phillies and Brooklyn last fall, is attracting attention in the Phillies' camp because he makes all his catches look easy. Lee, according to observers, gets the break on the ball, knows just where it is going and, if it's in the yard, is usually waiting under it. He has a deceptive stride that takes him over the ground at a speedy clip and, to top it off, an excellent throwing arm. He was a four-sport man at Mississippi College.

GABBY IS ELATED.
BRADENTON, Fla., March 10.—(P) Having beaten the world champion Athletics in two of the three games of a little series, Manager Gabby Street is highly elated with the showing made by his Cardinals in their 1931 showing so far.

The most gratifying exhibition, according to Street, was the showing of his regular pitchers against the Mackmen. Fellows like Flint Rhem, Sylvester Johnson, Al Grabowski and Paul Derringer came through with flying colors.

PRELIMENTS CONFER.
TAMPA, Fla., March 10.—(P)—President Sidney Weil, of the Cincinnati Reds, seeking an outfielder and one infielder, today went to Bradenton near here and discussed a deal with President Sam Breadon, of the St. Louis Cardinals, but neither executive disclosed anything about the conversation. Meanwhile, Manager Dan Howley sent his Rhinelanders through a three-hour drill that included all types of conditioning exercises.

FIRST NIGHT GAME.
HOUSTON, Texas, March 10.—(AP) The New York Giants and the Chicago White Sox will play the first night baseball game ever participated in by two major league teams here March 21. Present Fred Ankenman, of the Houston, Texas league, Buffs, announced today.

Ankenman was advised by Secretary Harry Grabner, of the White Sox, that John McGraw, manager of the Giants, had consented to play the game at night.

Two games will be played at 7:30 and 8:30 o'clock tonight at Sunset Park in the second round of the annual colored city intercollegiate basketball championship tournament. Morris Brown plays Morehouse and Clark meets the Collegians, a semi-pro team, in the night program.

brought about an onslaught of selling to realize profits. Official announcements that only 709,000,000 bushels of corn yet remained in farmers' hands against a five-year average of 1,077,432,000 were responsible for the transient price gains.

Corn closed weak, 3-8 to 7-1/2 lower, wheat unchanged to 3-5c, oats unchanged to 1-8 down, and provisions unchanged to 47c setback.

Demand from corn shippers here was disappointing, although recent Unexpected firmness of Liverpool wheat quotations and smallness of receipts at European continental markets helped to steady wheat. Oats were influenced somewhat by smallness of receipts.

Big stocks of cured meats depressed the provision market, despite sharp upturns in hog values.

Highlights of Wall Street

BY CHARLES W. STORM,
Editor, the News Service of Wall Street.

NEW YORK, March 10.—(NANA) Although a break of 10 points in the Chemical, heretofore considered one of the premier investment stocks, unsettled a strong and active stock market which prevailed during the early trading today. Wall Street feels confident that the material improvement in foreign affairs and the change for the better in the price trend of silver will ultimately result in greater industrial activity throughout the world.

Return of confidence is being most vividly registered in the bond market, where an urgent demand prevails. The demand for bonds is not greater than it has been for many months and the size of the purchases may be best gleaned from the fact that $125,000,000 of New York Central and Pennsylvania railroad bonds were quickly oversubscribed by investors when offered today. Big investment houses and institutions are so impressed with the increased demand for bonds that many issues which have been held in abeyance will now be offered to the public. Sale of the securities will supply industrial, railroad and public utility corporations with funds with which to go ahead with their programs for improvement and expansion.

IGNORING BAD NEWS.
So confident is the Street that the improvement in foreign conditions will result in increased business that unfavorable statements are being ignored. This was particularly true today when the night of the unfilled tonnage figures of the United States Steel Corporation for the month of February showing a decrease of 167,137 tons had been reported. The tonnage hauled by trucks, however, represented about 8 percent of the freight traffic of the Atlantic Coast Line.

The figures submitted were included in the course of a general commercial investigation into the status of motor transport competition with railroads.

PUBLIC UTILITIES STRONG.
The day's business was marked with further increased activity and strength in the public utility shares, many of which advanced to new high prices for this movement. Prominent in this group were American and Foreign Power, United Gas Improvement, Consolidated Gas International Telephone and Telegraph, Electric Power and Light and United Corporation.

In the case of the important public utilities are reported to have taken on large speculative lines of their respective companies in anticipation of the big consolidations and mergers which are planned in the public utility field. The utilities, however, sold off with the rest of the market when Allied Chemical broke badly.

Tobacco shares showed increased activity under the leadership of R. J. Reynolds' "B" stock in which a strong group is declared to have started active.

Oil shares continued to show a heavy undertone, due to further price cutting of crude oil.

MERCHANDISING STOCKS.
One of the biggest commission houses in the Street informed its clients that it was optimistic with regard to the future of the merchandising stocks. It said that the expenditure of the soldiers' bonuses would increase in a better showing in the greater business for retail stores and added that the fact that Easter came three weeks earlier this year would also result in a better showing for merchandising and retail stores for March compared with the same month last year.

R. H. Macy & Co. stock was active and advanced a point. McCrory showed greater activity at higher prices due to the fact that the company's sales for the first two months of this year showed a substantial increase over the corresponding period of 1930.

The price of silver showed a further advance today and predictions are being made of an additional sub-stantial rise in the price of the metal. International Silver again advanced.

CAR LOADINGS.
AGAIN DECREASE
WASHINGTON, March 10.—(AP)—Revenue freight loadings for the week ending February 28 were announced today by the American Railway Association as totaling 682,000 cars.

This was a decrease of 31,938 cars below the preceding week attributed to the Washington birthday holiday and a decrease of 217,408 cars below the same week of 1930.

Miscellaneous freight loadings totaled 250,097, a decrease of 110,234 below the same week of 1930; merchandise 188,369 cars, decrease 9,976; forest products 32,223 cars, decrease 2,883; grain and grain products 2,521; and grain and grain products 4,050, decrease 4,054; live stock 20,050 cars, decrease 5,804.

FORD MAKES $5,109
DETROIT, March 10.—(AP)—The Ford Motor Company today announced its world production for February totaled $5,109 cars and trucks, the highest monthly output since last September.

The announcement said production would be further increased during the current month, "reflecting increased sales."

Havana Embassy Being Bombed

Body of Man Is Found Hanging on Rope in Doorway.

HAVANA, March 10.—(AP)—While police combed the city today for the perpetrators of a recent series of bombings, a bomb exploded in the Spanish embassy and when police reached there they found the body of a man hanging at the end of a rope in the doorway.

He appeared to be a suicide, but the body was not identified and police were at a loss to explain the man's choice of a place to die.

The bomb did little damage and the bombers escaped.

Earlier in the day a cache of firearms was reported discovered by police in the home of a former army officer, who was placed under arrest.

These developments followed a raid during the night on the office of the humorist weekly Karikato, whose editor, Julio Gannard, was slightly wounded. Another wild shot was reported to have struck a small boy.

DR. PEPPER COMPANY
SALES MANAGER HERE

W. V. Ballou, sales manager of Dr. Pepper Company, beverage syrup manufacturers with headquarters in Dallas, Texas, was in Atlanta Tuesday conferring with Jack McCall, sales representative for the company in this territory.

Georgia, along with North and South Carolina, has been included in the territory covered by the company this year, and Mr. Ballou is highly pleased with the progress that he believes is being made at the start.

The company is getting good distribution in the Atlanta territory. Mr. Ballou reports, and a local plant, operating under franchise as the Dr. Pepper Bottling Company, will soon be running at full capacity.

Mr. Ballou points to his company's action in increasing its advertising appropriation 30 percent as an indication of faith in the future. He says that 1931 will be a better year for those who make it better, and believes that business will have a bright outlook at the close of this year.

BUSINESS SITUATION
OVER WORLD IMPROVES

WASHINGTON, March 10.—(AP)—A few encouraging developments in the world business situation were reported today by the commerce department's weekly summary but no general advance was seen.

"In Japan the import trade became more active," the summary said. "Some increase in inquiries from Europe and the United States for Chinese products has been reported. Foreign goods stock are scarce in India."

"Buoyancy continues to characterize the Australian wool market, where Japanese purchases for the wool season activity in the Netherlands East Indies has improved slightly."

"The recent improvement in Argentina did not continue into March, owing to unprecedented heat. Brazilian coffee shipments declined, but the last week with prices slightly firmer; general business remains depressed."

"Business depression in France was further accentuated during February with unemployment rising sharply."

"A more optimistic tone is developing in the corresponding period of 1930. The price of silver showed a further advance today and predictions are being made of an additional substantial rise in the price of the metal. International Silver again advanced."

GRIGSBY GRUNOW
TO ABSORB FIRM

CHICAGO, March 10.—(AP)—Stockholders of Majestic Hotel Corporation and the Grigsby-Grunow Company today approved plans to consolidate the two companies, almost without a dissenting vote.

The shareholders of the Grigsby-Grunow Company also approved plans for the issuance of $5,000,000 bonds.

STEEL FIRM INSTALLS
GIGANTIC MACHINE

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, March 10.—(AP)—The Republic Steel Corporation has installed at its Warren, Ohio, plant a machine for the first time, an automatic cleaning, plating, enameling and baking machine, it was reported for finishing conduit pipe, it was announced today.

The new machine is capable of handling 10 lengths, or 100 feet of conduit pipe per minute, galvanized by zinc, electroplated on the outside and having an enamel coating baked on the inside.

The machine, 207 feet long and 15 feet wide, cost for the trilling consideration of $20,000, most of it exactly $132 Tuesday night—all the money he had with him when the two parties of the second part, driving a car to a side-road somewhere near Jonesboro, took George's money, tossed his bag out the window and fled.

A kindly motorist drove George into Atlanta where he reported his mishap to police shortly after midnight. The item was that the robbers' car was 301-77, he said.

POOL ROOM FIRM
FINED BY RECORDER

Isaac Yohel and Ashel Pizanti were fined $400 in recorder's court Tuesday on charges of operating a poolroom without a license. They appealed and posted bond for continuance of the case in city court.

It was charged that Yohel and Pizanti were operating a pocket billiard hall at 21 Marietta street despite refusal of the police committee to grant permission for such an establishment. Previously the operators had obtained a junction restraining piece from interference, but it was testified Tuesday that charges were preferred at a time when the injunctions were not in force.
